

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

Held at the White House Today With President

Panama and Cuban Reciprocity Were Thoroughly Discussed

Germany Follows Suit Recognizing New Republic and French Officials are Pleased—Minister to Washington from Panama is Announced.

Panama, Nov. 7.—Word has reached here this morning that the U. S. cruiser Atlanta had arrived at Colon.

Washington, Nov. 7.—There was an important conference at the White House this morning at which were present Senators Allison, Aldrich, Sponsor, Hale, Cullom and Platt of Connecticut. The Senators warmly congratulated the President on the prompt action taken yesterday in recognizing the infant republic of Panama and assured him of the support of the Senate in this matter.

Regarding Cuban reciprocity, the methods whereby the President's plans may be carried out by Congress were discussed. It has not yet been decided whether it shall be by bill or joint resolution that the Cuban treaty shall be made effective.

How far opposition to all this may develop in Congress is now a matter of conjecture. Certain it is that Republican leaders are prepared to endorse the course and policy of the administration and it is equally certain that Senator Morgan and other advocates of the Nicaraguan route are as thoroughly prepared to criticize and oppose. Senator Morgan has already announced that directly after Congress convenes in extra session he will introduce a resolution calling upon the state department for a report of its relations with Colombia. If precedents are followed, answer will not be made to this resolution before the regular session opens. Meanwhile Senator Morgan declares the action of the United States to be unjustifiable and predicts war with Colombia as its result, necessitating the indefinite maintenance at the isthmus of a large and expensive naval force.

That this fear is shared to some extent by the administration is shown by the dispatch to Colon of American warships and the hurrying of Admiral Coghlan from Washington to the isthmus. Ordinarily a single ship on either side of the strait has been deemed sufficient to maintain treaty obligations, but on this occasion is added to an unusual force of eight or more ships, and extra large force of marines and blue jackets. The Mayflower will leave Washington tomorrow for Colon, having on board Admiral Coghlan and Consul General Gidger. She will reach Colon in about seven days.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Consul Malmros, at Colon, cabled the state department this morning that Porfirio Mendez has been appointed and inaugurated as governor of Colon and has officially proclaimed the independence of the republic of Panama. The dispatch adds that everything is quiet here today. A message from Vice Consul General Chapman at Panama, says that quiet also prevails in that city. A belated dispatch received from Minister Beaupre at Bogota dated November 4, says that "the most exciting" prevails in Bogota on account of a series of serious disturbances on the left, tending toward a movement for independence."

The state department confirms the Paris announcement that Burzon Varilla has been chosen by the new Panama government as its diplomatic representative at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The secretary of state says the President was forced by the treaty of 1846 to recognize the new regime in Panama. The President's action has created suspicion that the revolt was backed to pave the way for canal construction.

Berlin, Nov. 7.—The German foreign office has authorized a statement to the effect that Germany approves of the action of the United States in recognizing the independence of the new republic of Panama.

Paris, Nov. 7.—Word was received here this afternoon that Burzon Varilla had been appointed minister at Washington for the republic of Panama.

Varilla is a prominent French financier and one of the most important stockholders of the French Panama company.

Paris, Nov. 7.—The news that the United States has recognized the new republic of Panama has favorably impressed French official circles. The government has now definitely decided to follow suit, provided Panama guarantees the maintenance of the rights of the French Panama Canal company and protecting French interests.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Having to all intents and purposes recognized the republic of Panama as the latest addition to the number of American states, and having, through Secretary Hay, elaborately explained all of the circumstances and motives which influenced the administration in its policy, the government of the United States is now waiting for Colombia or the new

PANAMA REPUBLIC

Recognized by the United States Government—Telegrams Sent to Federal Officials Giving Notice to That Effect.

Washington, Nov. 7.—This Panama republic, it is feared, after all has been precipitated by the United States to make the Panama canal easy. This would appear because of the avidity of the United States to recognize the de facto government. The announcement is made at the state department that instructions had gone to Minister Beaupre at Bogota, and Mr. Ehrman, the new isthmian republic that the United States recognizes the government established by the revolutionists.

The decision to recognize the de facto government of Panama was arrived at after a protracted session of the cabinet yesterday at which every member was present except Secretaries Root and Wilson. No other subject was considered. The president emphasized the importance of the recognition of the de facto government. With the withdrawal of the Colombian officials the isthmus was left entirely without a government unless that established by the secessionists should be recognized, and this step seemed necessary for the transaction of the routine business of the United States on the isthmus.

The following telegram was sent by the state department to Mr. Ehrman, the acting consul general of the United States at Panama:

"The people of Panama have, by an apparently unanimous movement, dissolved their political relations with the republic of Colombia and assumed their independence. When you are satisfied that a de facto government, republican in form and without substantial opposition from its own people, has been established in the state of Panama, you will enter into relations with it as the acting United States consul general at the isthmus and look to it for an action to protect the persons and property of citizens of the United States and to keep open the isthmian transit in accordance with the obligations of existing treaties governing the relations of the United States to that territory."

"The people of Panama having, by an apparently unanimous movement, dissolved their political connection with the Republic of Colombia and resumed their independence, and having adopted a government of their own, republican in form, with which the government of the United States of America has entered into relations, the president of the United States, in accordance with the ties of friendship which have so long and so happily existed between the respective nations, most earnestly commends to the governments of Colombia and Panama the peaceful and equitable settlement of all questions at issue between them."

FIVE LITTLE ONES

And a House to Care for Too Much, and the Child Took Poison.

South Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 7.—Lily Seet, 14 years of age, the foster mother of her uncle's five children—the oldest about her own age—and the housekeeper and guardian of her uncle's house, tried to kill herself by swallowing paris green, because, she said, she was "tired of being overworked." For more than a year Lily has been the housekeeper for her uncle, Richard Fay, who is a widower with five small children, and the whole care of the house and her infant charges fell on her young shoulders. She may recover.

WIDOW ROBBED

Mrs. Engwerson Charged Exorbitant Prices to Get Remains of Her Husband Home from Europe.

Mrs. Otto Engwerson, wife of the Columbus musician, who, at one time was musical instructor of the Denison University Conservatory of Music, was cruelly robbed by foreigners in her efforts to bring the remains of her husband back to America. Professor and Mrs. Engwerson had been traveling in Germany and Austria and had gone to Karlsruhe, where Prof. Engwerson was laid ill and death resulted. Immediately the residents of Karlsruhe began a systematic series of oppression and robbery practically because they found Mrs. Engwerson alone and at their mercy. In a recent letter to a friend Mrs. Engwerson says:

"It cost me $20 to see my husband's remains before they were sent away, and $16 for a minister whose services I did not require. For embalming alone I was charged the sum of $400. I had to pay $106 for the bed and my husband was in it only one day. They could have made me pay for the carpet had they so desired."

"Now I want to know if there is not some way to get notice of this to the authorities at Washington and have the matter taken up, for it is awful the way they treat Americans. Something ought to be done to help out the next one who happens to be as unfortunate as I. I will show you my bills and I can tell you that it cost me a little fortune. Some warning should be given the sick that go to Karlsruhe."

CHURCH

At Centerburg is Without a Pastor as Rev. Mr. Harold Goes to the West.

Centerburg, O., Nov. 7.—For some time it has been known that the Rev. W. S. Harold, pastor of the C. P. church has been thinking of a new field of labor; but it was not until Wednesday of this week that it became known that he would ask the Presbytery to release him at once. He goes to St. Joseph, Mo., where he will have charge of two missions in the city. The Rev. Mr. Harold is a man that is well liked in this community, and has the good will and best wishes of all. The church here has taken no action towards securing a pastor.

SINGER

And Author Whose Wife Elope With Young Pullman is to Marry Soon.

Boston, Nov. 7.—Frederick V. Bowers, singer and author of popular songs, whose former wife, Blanche Louise Barrett, member of a Milwaukee family, eloped with George M. Pullman, Jr., in 1900 is to be married to Miss Charlotte Marshall of Mobile, Ala. The wedding will be the culmination of a romance that began when the bride to be heard Bowers sing in New York some time ago.

Bowers first married in 1897 and when his wife eloped with young Pullman he followed them in a sensational chase across the country and sued Pullman. He also secured a divorce.

STORY

Of Cudahy's Release Told By Man to the Police.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 7.—Thomas Cortello, who told the police he is one of the trio that kidnapped the son of Edward Cudahy, of Omaha, and released him for $25,000 ransom, is being held here for developments. Cortello says he does not know the present whereabouts of Pat Crowe, whom he accuses of being a member of the gang. After Millionaire Cudahy had deposited $25,000 near a red lantern, as demanded by the kidnapers, Cortello says he, Crowe and Johnson, the third man, emerged from their hiding places, took the ransom to Rigg's house where the banker's son was held captive, divided the money equally and left the city on different trains, after releasing the boy. The police believe Cortello's story.

FIRE

Does Irreparable Damage To Rare Botanical Specimens.

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—Fire did irreparable damage at Shaw's Garden this morning. The flames started at the hot house in which the East Indian collection is kept and destroyed a number of rare plants, some of which, it is said, cannot be replaced. The monetary loss is estimated at between $7,000 and $10,000. Shaw's Garden contains one of the greatest botanical collections in the world and represents the life work of the late Henry Shaw, who, at his death, bequeathed it to the city.

ROOSEVELT

Not Disturbed by Hanna Talk—Favors a New Chairman for Republican Committee.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Ohio Republicans are lining up for and against Senator Hanna as the Republican nominee for the presidency next year. Friends of the President and of the Senator are coming out strong for their preferences. It looks as though nothing short of a disavowal on the part of Senator Hanna now would stop the movement in his behalf, which now threatens the interests of President Roosevelt in the Ohio delegation to the next National convention.

But the friends of President Roosevelt profess to be not in the least disturbed by the talk of Hanna's more enthusiastic followers that the result of Tuesday's election in Ohio makes the Senator a strong Presidential possibility, notwithstanding his own declaration that he is not and would not be a candidate for the nomination. Roosevelt's supporters say this talk will quickly die out. Roosevelt, they assert, has the nomination "clinched," and nothing short of a revolution in the Republican party which would split it up the middle can possibly bring about the nomination of anyone else.

NEW CHAIRMAN

Said to be Wanted by Roosevelt—May be Ex-Governor Crane.

Washington, Nov. 7.—W. Murray Crane, ex-Governor of Ohio and Republican boss of the state, is expected to be named by the President at the White House. Crane, who is a millionaire and a close friend of the President, is believed to be the man picked out for chairman of the Republican National committee in next year's campaign, and it is thought such announcement to that effect will be made shortly. The President is known to have urged Senator Hanna to continue in the chairmanship next year, but this is thought to have been done as a sort of compliment, with no expectation that the Senator would accept, and little real desire to have him.

For reasons affecting the Ohio campaign the Senator thought it best to allow the impression to go out that he might be National chairman again, but now that the Ohio fight is over and the Senator sure of returning to the Senate it is expected that he will soon let it be known he does not intend to subject himself to the strain of running another National campaign for the Republicans.

A definite statement from the Senator will be followed, in all probability, by an announcement that Mr. Roosevelt's campaign next year will be managed by the Massachusetts ex-Governor. The latter is said to be a man of great executive ability, and his business standing and identification with financial interests will enable him to give material aid in the collection of campaign funds.

HANNA DECLINES

To Again Serve as National Republican Chairman.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 7.—Senator Marcus A. Hanna will not be at the head of the Republican National committee in the next campaign. This statement is issued with full authority. Nor will any power be found to make him recede from his determination not to lead the fight in 1904. So fixed is this intention that he will, if necessary, decline to serve if elected. This situation will, however, scarcely be encountered.

That this announcement will be a sore disappointment to President Roosevelt and his friends goes without saying. It is known to all that the Chief Executive is extremely solicitous that the old pilot shall be at the wheel next year. In 1900 Hanna said half-heartedly that he wanted to retire from the Chairmanship, and even went so far as to give it out that he would ask that another take the wheel.

Hanna has been seriously ill. His physicians, who pleaded against the part he took in the late campaign, have told him that he is no longer fit for a wearing, grinding national fight.

Philbrick's Boom

Columbus, Nov. 7.—Colonel C. C. Philbrick, formerly of Licking county, recently director of public safety here, is being boomed for the Democratic nomination for mayor.

GOES TO CHAIR

Because He Held the Horse for the Gang of Murderers.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—Otis Loveland has been sentenced to die in the electric chair February 19 for complicity in the murder of George Geyer, a farmer.

Loveland, Louis Harmon, Miles Wallingford and Lon Greenlee were arrested for the murder. Wallingford committed suicide, Harmon is in the annex awaiting electrocution and Greenlee is on trial.

Loveland was not in the house when the crime was committed, but was in the roadway holding a horse for the party. He was adjudged to be as guilty as the principals.

PRIESTS

Were Chief Among the Alleged Victims of Caspar Ernst—Surrendered by His Bondsmen.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—Caspar Ernst, capitalist, banker and owner of several large blocks in St. Paul, is in jail today. The charge upon which he was arrested is forgery and embezzlement, perpetrated by Father Matzler, a Catholic priest of Chippewa Falls, Wis. Ernst was admitted to bail a few days ago, but his bondsmen delivered him up to the sheriff, after investigating his affairs. It is alleged that the money he handled and with which he purchased two valuable brick blocks here, was contributed by various Catholic priests throughout the Northwest.

A few days ago, after his arrest, Ernst transferred to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. Investigations are pending, and in the meantime the claims of the Catholic priests indicate that they were made the especial dupes of the alleged capitalist.

Ernst is 35 years old. Recently he bought the Germania Bank building, paying $165,000 for it. It is said he had not a dollar of his own at that time, yet he paid for it. The disclosures which have been made lead to the belief that he has sunk thousands of dollars for his clients, and, from indications, they were nearly all among the Catholic clergy.

BYGONES

The Murphy and McLaughlin Factions in Greater New York Begin to Get Together.

New York, Nov. 7.—The animosities growing out of the controversy between Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany and Hugh McLaughlin, of Brooklyn, are rapidly disappearing and it is conjectured that before the close of the year complete harmony will prevail between the veteran leader and Senator McCarr, the representative of Murphy in Brooklyn. The prevailing sentiment among the rank and file of the party, as among the district leaders is to let bygones be bygones, and not to indulge in any reprisals.

POISONED

By Eating Baked Beans That Had Been Kept in a Tin Pan Over Night

Considerable excitement was occasioned at the home of Mr. C. B. Loughman, 184 Monroe street, on Friday, over the fact that six members of the family had been suddenly taken sick and had all the symptoms of poisoning, being in great distress and vomiting continuously. A hurry call was sent to Dr. J. N. Stone, who responded in a short time, and after working for several hours with the sick parties, succeeded in relieving them all, although they were all quite sick the greater part of the day. The poisoning is supposed to have been caused by the eating of baked beans, which had been eaten the evening before. It is understood that the beans had stood in a tin vessel over night, and the physician is of the opinion that this was the cause of the sickness. At this writing the members of the family are all out of danger.

BUCHANAN

Issues General Strike Order to Bridge and Structural Iron Workers of America.

New York, Nov. 7.—President Buchanan issued a general order today for a national strike of the International Association of Bridge Men and Structural Iron Workers. The strike will be chiefly centered in New York and President Buchanan declared that when the fact are known that a organized labor in the country will stand in the way of the workers, President Buchanan will issue a general order to the workers to strike because the negotiations between his committee of iron workers and the iron league over the proposed union of the local New York bridge men has failed.

UNITED STATES SENATORS

Who Are Still Eligible for the Nuptial Knot--Depew Platt and Stewart Have Blazed the Way, to Say Nothing of Mr. Hepburn.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Since Depew and Platt and Stewart have blazed the way—not to mention Hepburn of Idaho, aged 51, who married since the last meeting of the senate and fled to Alaska with his bride—matrons with marriageable daughters are flocking to ward Washington in the hope of a profitable social season this winter. It's true the choicest morsels have already been gobbled up, but the prospective bridegroom class of the senate is still an organization of some numerical strength, to whose members there can be no objection on the score of desirability and eligibility.

There's Pettus, for instance, of Alabama, only 82 years old, and still able to get about without the aid of an invalid's chair. He's a widower. So is Allison of Iowa, a mere strapping of 74. So are Clark of Montana, aged 64 who could well support a wife on his income, reputed to be $15,000,000 a year; Cockrell of Missouri, who is 69, but who no doubt wouldn't care to assume any new responsibilities until he finds out what the next Democratic national convention is going to do.

with his presidential aspirations: Frye of Maine, a callow youngster of 72, said to be engaged to the widow of Vice President Garrett Hobart; Beveridge of Indiana, almost too young for a second venture, with his scant 42; Warren of Wyoming, a lad of 59; the youthful Dillingham, of Vermont, aged 60; Dietrich and Millard of Nebraska, of the kindergarten class, aged respectively 50 and 67; and Patterson of Colorado, a promising youth of 63.

Of bachelors there are but a few. Kean of New Jersey, is but 51. When he grows up he may decide to marry; also Kittredge, of South Dakota, who is 42. Penrose of Pennsylvania, is a year his senior. Senator Quay once advised him to marry. He said it would help him in a political way. "Is it for the good of the organization that I should take a wife?" Penrose asked his senior colleague. "It is!" was the emphatic reply.

"Very well," replied Penrose, apparently resigned to the situation. "Let the organization pick the girl. I'll marry her."

That was a year ago, but Penrose is still single.

WHITE ELEPHANT

Will Be the Big Unwieldy Republican Majority in the Legislature, and Trouble for the G. O. P. is Bound to Come--Ohio Democracy Will Be Rejuvenated and Made All the Stronger for the Future.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—The landslide that swept this state on Tuesday is not without its recompense to Ohio Democrats. In the end the recompense will be both positive and negative, positive because it will eventually result in a new and better alignment of Democratic forces in this state, and negative because the Republicans, despite their great victory, have acquired with it some new troubles of their own.

The unprecedented majority which the Republicans will have in the Seventy-sixth General Assembly will be accompanied by the same dangers that always go with cumbersome majorities and too much power. The Republican managers concede the fact. General Dick, before leaving Columbus, expressed his apprehension regarding the next session of the Legislature, and John R. Malloy, who is as well able as anyone to see through a millstone with a hole in it, has acquired a reflective mood following the first few exuberant moments of his celebration of Tuesday's victory. So large a majority as the Republicans will have in the new Legislature will render that body not as susceptible to bosses and bossism as its predecessor. A reasonable working majority is always better for the party in power than an overwhelming one. Big majorities have a way of taking the bit in their teeth once in awhile that is rather unpleasant for those who aspire to drive them.

As soon as Hanna is re-elected by the coming aggregation of Republican statesmen a crop of jobs may be expected to grow out of the Republican legislative majority destined to make history for a long time to come. There will undoubtedly be an effort made to amend the Cox code and right here the trouble will begin. A substantial number of Republican representatives and senators may take it into their heads to make the code in its second analysis somewhat to the principles of home rule, and at this point Boss Cox's troubles will begin. He cannot control an overwhelming majority like that which will sit in the next Legislature as he controlled its now insignificant predecessor. The G. O. P. elephant has grown unwieldy in Ohio and threatens to become unmanageable. Factional strife among the Republicans will again crop out to an extent that will

THE LATEST PICTURE OF MISSING MILLIONAIRE

This is the latest picture of E. L. Wentz, the Philadelphia millionaire who came ashore on the mountains of Virginia, and for whom a reward of $25,000 is offered. A dispatch to the Advocate yesterday said that Wentz is believed to be in the hands of the kidnappers.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—The John S. Wentz said last night that the letter received by the family purporting to be from his lost son Edward L. Wentz, was not written by the young man. He added that no new clues had been found in the young man's disappearance. The man who brought the letter to family from the mountains had declared that he was a clumsy forger, on which he had tried to obtain the money.

Traveling by Map.

The experiences of Captain Joseph La Barge, as told in "The History of Early Steamboat Navigation on the Missouri River," includes this story:

Captain La Barge was a pilot and Indian trader for fifty eventful years, and on one of his trips up the river he had a party of Englishmen aboard. They had a map and applied themselves industriously to the business of identifying the various places on it with those along their route. They were in the pilot house a good deal, and one of them was inclined to instruct in the geography of the country the veteran pilot, who had spent all his life on or near the river.

"What place is this that we are approaching, Mr. Pilot?" he asked. "St. Charles, sir," La Barge replied. "You are mistaken, sir. According to the map, it is—"

La Barge made no reply. He stopped as usual at St. Charles and then went his way. Presently they came to another village. "What place, captain?" inquired the Englishman.

"Washington, Mo. sir."

"Wrong again," the map gives this place as—"

This experience was repeated several times, the captain's temper becoming more ruffled with each repetition. Presently a flock of wild geese passed over the river. The Englishmen were standing on the hurricane roof in front of the pilot house.

"What kind of birds are those, captain?" asked one of them in eager haste.

The captain, whose language still showed something of his French origin, replied: "Look at your map. He tell you."

Bought Art to Destroy It.

The attendants in the art gallery of a department store in Brooklyn were startled the other day to see a man deliberately destroy two pictures that he had just purchased at a cost of $47. The man, wealthy and aims to have a collection of art objects that have no duplicates. He had purchased in the art gallery that was the scene of his vandalism a painting for which he paid $1,000. After it was sent home he was showing it to a friend, who, knowing the collector's weakness, told him he had seen two reproductions of the painting in the same gallery, one priced at $35, the other at $12.

"Go and buy them for me," said the collector, "and when you get them break them up. I'll give you a check for $47 before you go home."

The friend declined the task: so the collector went to the store himself, pointed out the two pictures, and after he had paid for them destroyed them on the spot.

This same man ordered a table with a carved top, for which he paid $300, and after it had been finished he went to the artist who had designed it and stood by him while he destroyed the original drawing for the table. That was a part of the contract, and he meant to see it carried out.—New York Press.

Novel Work For Submarines.

The schools of porpoise off the coast of Brittany are playing havoc with the fish. Recently certain cruisers of the French navy were sent out to practice on the "sea pigs" with their secondary batteries. The experiment was a failure. Now it is proposed to use the submarine as the only weapon with which war can be waged successfully against the pest. Bombs will be shot from the tubes into the fish and blow them to pieces.

Cupid and the Cash Carrier

By BENNET MUSSON

Copyright, 1933, by T. C. McClure

Through the great dry goods house of Chase, Remington, Bentley & Co. ranged the usual throng of shoppers—eager faced women and bewildered looking men. In the rear of the store Mr. William L. Remington, the sole survivor of the original firm, sat at a roll top desk in his private office.

Dignified, gray haired and sedate was Mr. Remington, and he looked thoughtful as he leaned back in his revolving chair and tapped the edge of his desk with a square envelope of rough blue paper. The envelope contained an invitation to a reception to be given by Mrs. Eleanor Chase, the widow of one of the former partners of the house and a society woman.

Mr. Remington was not a society man, and it was of his son Jack, aged twenty-two, that he thought as he fingered the envelope and of Eleanor Chase's daughter Nancy.

He rose, opened a door which led into the main part of the store and, threading the maze of aisles, made his way to the silk counter. There stood Jack, who was working his way through the various departments of the business, devoting the charms of his personality to the display of a roll of silk to one of a crowd of well dressed women.

Mr. Remington looked on approvingly as his handsome son concluded negotiations with the woman, took a bill from her and, inclosing it in a little nickel plated case, placed it in the receptacle of the cash carrier. He pulled a cord, and the box shot up till it reached the narrow lines of metal, whence it was whisked with business-like precision to the eyrie of the cashier.

As Jack turned to another customer his father waited; then, recognizing the purchaser of the silk, he stepped forward and engaged her in conversation.

Presently the nickel plated case shot back over the carrier and dropped with an assertive click into its receptacle. Mr. Remington released it, relieved it of its contents and, with a brief "I'll give Mrs. Waldron her change, Jack," which received an answering nod from the young man, handed the money to the woman.

But Remington senior did not give her all that the case contained. He withheld a small piece of folded white paper, which he regarded idly for a moment, then opened. Written across it in hastily formed characters were the words:

"It is an age till tomorrow night, dearest."

The old gentleman held the paper nearest to his eyes and read the message again. Then he looked at his son, who was talking animatedly. Then he refolded the paper carefully, placed it in his vest pocket and walked slowly away. He went to another part of the store, from which he could get a view of the cashier's post, and looked up.

There among the converging wires of the cash carrier was a high desk, and over its top protruded a head of wavy brown hair, and occasionally as its owner reached for the metal cases Mr. Remington caught sight of the pretty, refined face of Gertrude Terry, his cashier.

The old gentleman watched the girl for awhile, then went to his private office and again seated himself at his desk. He drew the piece of white paper from his pocket and looked at it thoughtfully. Then he turned his attention to the square, blue envelope which contained Mrs. Chase's invitation and glanced from one to the other, as though weighing in his mind the value of each.

Perhaps the memory of his own married life, spent with a woman of society, whose tastes and temperament were at variance with his own, passed in mental review. The many nights he had sat at his lonely fireside while his wife was attending functions to which he had little inclination to follow her may have intruded themselves on his reflections. Whatever his thoughts—and they contained no bitterness for the woman who was gone—he kept them to himself.

He did not say anything to Jack when they left the store together except to tell him that he had some private business to attend to and might be late for their 7 o'clock dinner. Then he gave the driver of his coupe an address and presently alighted at a small frame house.

His ring was answered by a gray haired old man who walked with difficulty. He seemed greatly surprised to see Mr. Remington. When the latter was seated in the little parlor he regarded the invalid with kindly interest.

"Well, Max, I am sorry that time has not dealt better with you," he said at last. "It's a long cry back to our college days, isn't it?"

Old Max Terry sank painfully into a chair. "The last time you were in this house," he answered slowly, "was to attend my wife's funeral. No time has not been overgood to me, but I don't complain."

"I want you to tell me of her," said Remington, and he drew his cashier's father on to talk of the mother and wife.

The rich old merchant listened thoughtfully while Max Terry told of years spent in perfect companionship, years during which his ambition to become a great musician had slowly suffered collapse, but which had been lightened and beautified by the sympathy of a devoted, loving woman whose soul was attuned to his.

When he had finished Mr. Remington was leaning forward in his chair. "And now that she is gone you have your daughter left," he said gently.

"Yes. She's just like her mother, thank heaven," responded Max Terry, shaking back, with a sigh.

At that moment the front door was opened briskly, steps sounded along the hall, and Gertrude Terry entered the parlor. She stopped abruptly when she saw the visitor.

"I have been telling Mr. Remington about your mother," Max Terry said, smiling at the girl.

"Did he call to ask about her?" she inquired.

"I called for a purpose of my own," said Remington, advancing toward her. "I accidentally received this note from the cash carrier this afternoon." And he produced the bit of white paper.

The girl was pale, but she regarded him unflinchingly. "I suppose you think it is very wrong of me to love Jack," she said.

"No, but I think it would have been better for him to have told me about the affair."

"I would not let him, and I have been trying to tell him that he must not see me again."

Mr. Remington smiled. "You took it for granted that I should not want an unofficial partner in my family who was brave and womanly merely because she happened to be poor," he said softly, taking her hand.

The next morning Chase, Remington, Bentley & Co. was crowded as usual when Jack pulled a slip of white paper from the metal messenger of the cash carrier. The message, which was in his father's handwriting, was as follows:

"Miss Terry will soon leave the employ of this firm."

Jack leaped over the silk counter and hurried to his father's private office. The room was empty, but in a moment Gertrude and Mr. Remington entered.

Jack angrily handed the note to his father. "What is the meaning of this?" he demanded.

Mr. Remington looked at the paper complacently. "It means," he said, "that I think my future daughter-in-law should have time to prepare for her wedding."

Jack leaned against the roll top desk in wonderment, while Gertrude read the note.

"If I had known what was in it I should not have sent it," she said, with a reproachful smile at the elder Remington. "Is that your idea of breaking the news properly?"

"No," answered the old gentleman, "but I did not like to spoil the record that cash carrier has for revealing the unexpected."

PLUCKY LAD'S AMBITION.

Sets Himself Rules of Life and Starts Out to Enforce Education.

Sixteen-year-old Harold Bember Parker of Lowell, Mass., arrived at Poughkeepsie recently after wandering from academy to academy seeking a chance to work for his board and an opportunity to study, says the New York World. In his dress suitcase he carried a small card, which he produced as his guide in life. On the card was pasted a set of rules, clipped from a newspaper and said to have been pasted by Baron Rothschild in his bank.

They read as follows: Shun liquor. Dare to go forward. Never be discouraged. Be polite to everybody. Employ your time well. Never tell business lies. Pay your debts promptly. Be prompt in every thing. Bear all troubles patiently. Do not reckon upon chance. Make no useless acquaintances. Be brave in the struggle of life. Maintain your integrity as a sacred thing. Never appear to be something more than you are. Take time to consider; then decide positively. Carefully examine into every detail of your business.

"My mother is a poor widow," the lad said, "and after I had reached the second grade in the grammar school she found she would need my help. There was nothing for me to do but go to work in one of the Lowell mills. I started out to look for a job, and on my way I thought of the rules I found. I said to myself: 'If I go to work in a mill in Lowell, that will be the last of me. I must get an education before I can hope to be anybody or any big service to my mother.' I turned back and never went near the mill."

"A friend of my mother told her that I might get a chance at Newton school at Newton, N. J. I went there and worked six weeks, but found that I could not earn money enough to pay for such clothes as the professor told me I must have. I bought a football rig, and that used up my money, for I had earned only $35. I packed up and left Newton and went to N. York. There was no room for me in the preparatory school there. The proprietor is the same man who owned the Newton school when Mr. Holly, who now publishes the Harvard Catalogue, was there and worked his way through school."

"I went from N. York to Tarrytown, and the principal of the preparatory school there told me he had no place for me, but would write to my mother. At Peekskill the principal told me the same thing. Then I came to Poughkeepsie, hoping to get a chance in River View Military academy. I am obliged to sleep in the police station now, but I am not discouraged."

AMUSEMENTS

There are plenty of evidences going to show the public taste in affairs of the theatre have again turned to the good old-fashioned play that tells a coherent, legitimate story and serves to fill the interest of the auditor throughout the entire unfolding of the plot. While the better class of farce-comedies, vaudeville and melodrama will still have their admirers, the major portion of the lovers of the play house are getting just a trifle ashamed of witnessing "buzz saws" in place of actors and absurd and impossible alleged "thrilling dramas" in place of a well told and interesting tale.

The beautiful comedy drama "Sweet Clover" has met with remarkable success in the principal cities where the play has been presented. Two clever young newspaper and magazine writers, the Misses Pauline Phelps and Marion Short are the authors of the play, which is said to be a beautiful comedy drama in four acts of the style of "Hazel Kirke," "Caprice," and other plays of the kind we used to love. Mr. Otis B. Thayer, the well known character actor, assumed the role of "Jerome Holcombe," and Miss Edna Robb, one of the best of the younger emotional actresses, appears in the role of "Lois Holcombe." Surrounding these excellent actors are a number of favorite players to interpret the various roles. A special feature is the superb mounting of the play, special scenery for every act being carried entire to help out the illusion, together with some handsome costumes, quaint furniture and beautiful lighting effects. "Sweet Clover" will be the attraction at the Auditorium next Monday night, November 9.

NEXT WEDNESDAY.

The famous "Flat Iron" building at the corner of Broadway, facing Twenty-third street, in New York City, is now one of the first sought for by sightseers in the great Metropolis, as it is, without a doubt, the most marvelous piece of architecture to be found in any office building in the world. The corner is also noted for the pranks of the wind on a stormy day, as an umbrella will suddenly turn inside out, women's dresses will become inflated, and loaded wagons have been known to turn over, so fierce is the velocity of the wind. To reproduce this building and some of the effects of the wind for the stage purposes, seems at first impossible, but after much outlay of money and many days of experiment, the task was completed and the scene is now one of the features of the third act of "Driven from Home," in which Patricia the famous emotioning actress is now starring and playing to crowded houses. Auditorium Wednesday night, November 11.

TALENTED YOUNG ACTRESS

Here is the latest picture of Margaret Dale, the beautiful actress who is playing the leading part in John Drew's production of "Capt. Dieppe." Miss Dale is still a very young woman, but her success last season with Drew in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" has brought her a fame which has been denied to women of twice her age.

FASHIONABLE HOSIERY

A woman's wardrobe is not complete without dainty hosiery and smart slippers. Here are some pretty designs. No. 1 shows a handsome white silk stocking with hand drawn work in diamond design and hand embroidered. The sandal is a four-strapped gray suede with small steel buttons. No. 2 pictures a dainty white stocking with rose medallion and heavy hand embroidery in black. The slipper is gray suede. No. 3 is a black silk stocking with open embroidery in black. The patent leather shoe has a box toe. No. 4 is black with tapestry effect in hand embroidered swallow in black silk. The black shoe is of Russian leather.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At a regular meeting of Golden Rod Lodge, No. 100, A. O. U. W., Ancient Order of United Workmen, held Nov. 2, 1933, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in His all-wise providence to remove from our midst our worthy brother, Clinton A. Bland, who was killed while in discharge of his duties on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, Oct. 25, 1933; so be it Resolved, That in the death of our brother Golden Rod Lodge No. 100, A. O. U. W., has lost a true and devoted member, the company a valued employee, his family a kind and loving one, and we earnestly pray that God in His infinite mercy will enable all bereaved family and us his brothers, to bear up under our sad bereavement in Christian spirit and resignation and humble submission to the Divine will.

Resolved, That we tender to the sorrowing family our heartfelt condolence and commend them to join him who alone can alleviate earth's deepest sorrow.

GREAT RAILWAY DEPOT

Main Features of New Structure at Washington.

TO BE THE FINEST IN THE WORLD

Union Station to Be Built by Pennsylvania and B. and O. Railroads Will Cost $14,000,000—Twenty Thousand Persons Will Be Able to Move About the Building Without Crowding—Huge Passenger Concourse Planned.

A place in which 20,000 persons can move about without crowding and in which an assemblage of 5,000 persons would hardly be characterized as a crowd is a general description which, it is said, will fit the inclosed passenger concourse of the new Union station to be built by the Pennsylvania and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad companies in Washington, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. This station with its approaches will cost $14,000,000, and it will be the largest and most costly if not the handsomest railroad station in the world.

A general description of the station has recently been prepared. Marble, steel, glass, mahogany and bronze are the materials to be used in the construction of this great building, and Burnham of Chicago, the architect of the famous "White City," has evolved some new ideas for what he terms "an appropriate gateway to the nation's capital."

This structure will have a frontage of 160 feet, with a depth of 350 feet and a height of 100 feet. Three great arches, each thirty feet wide and fifty feet high, will open into a vestibule with triple domes, sixty odd feet high and thirty-five feet in diameter. And from within this vestibule there will be a vista through arches and domes of more than 300 feet on either side. Built on classic lines, this structure will be impressive as well for symmetry as for its massiveness.

Much of the interior of the station, embracing an area approximating 100,000 square feet, will have a clear space overhead of 100 feet. Although it may contain thousands of people, there will be no lack of fresh air. The main waiting room will have a barrel vault ceiling 100 feet high and a floor space 250 feet long and 100 feet wide. The main dining room is to be 65 by 100 feet in dimensions, with a height of 30 feet, and there is to be a ticket lobby 110 feet long, 54 feet wide and about 65 feet high. These are but three features of a wonderfully capacious and comprehensive building designed for the comfort and convenience of travelers. Perhaps the most remarkable section of the structure will be the great passenger concourse, which runs the entire length of the main building and is entirely inclosed, being 180 feet wide and 50 feet high. This will be as attractive as artistic decoration can make it, and there will be enough room in it to give 10,000 persons a square yard of room each to stand in.

Besides its handsome furnishings in mahogany, this station will have all of the modern appliances for public comfort and convenience. Baggage will be handled below the street level, and there will be numerous underground tramways to carry it from one part of the building to another. It is expected that it will take about two years to complete this station.

Fearful Separation.

Her father had read her the parable of the sheep and the goats at the day of judgment. She made no comment, but that night a sound of weeping came from her room. Her mother went as consoler.

"Why are you crying, dear?" "About the goats. Oh, I'm so afraid I'm a goat."

"Why, no, dearie. You are a sweet little lamb, and if you should die tonight you would go straight to heaven." With this and like assurance she was finally pacified.

The next night the same performance was repeated, and again her mother inquired the reason.

"It's the goats. I'm afraid about the goats."

"Didn't I tell you, dear, that you were a little lamb?"

"Oh," she sobbed, "I'm not crying about myself, but I'm afraid you may be a goat!"—Brooklyn Life.

In the Autumn.

There is something in the autumn sets my gypsy blood a-sing. When the harvest and the plow's sprightly wings are all a-whirl: With the purple and the scarlet and the yellow of the leaves.

While the fertile fields are freighted with the pumpkins and the sheaves.

When, within the witching woodlands, turtle doves are sadly calling. And the leaves of red and russet from the trees are sadly falling.

Touched with fervent farewell kisses by the autumn's am'rous mouth. And the swallows have departed to the summer of the south!

When the grass has left the meadow and the green has left the hill. And the only feathered songster is the plaintive whippoorwill!

When the apples in the orchard and the sumac's leaves are red. And the quails are loudly piping in the stubble where they feed!

Oh, the brilliant autumn season, the most brilliant of the year. When the gorgeous groves are gleaming ere the leaves begin to scar: When the maple boughs are crimson and the hickory's leaves are gold.

And the air is so sultry summer and the nights are wintry cold.

When the river is blue as steel and the sky is clear as glass. And the mist is on the mountain and the horriest on the grass: When the harvest is all garnered and the farmer's work is done.

And the blades are reconding with the pointer and the gun! —David J. Evans in Washington Post.

MOST SENSATIONAL PLAY IN MODERN FOOTBALL

Opinion differs among writers, coaches and players regarding the amount of danger in football. The new rules, making open play necessary between the 25-yard lines, were promulgated because it was thought they would minimize danger. Coach Yost recently stated that, in his opinion, open play was more dangerous, because a man tackled in the open, when running at top speed, was more liable to be injured than the men in a mass play. The most dangerous tackle in modern football is the "hard and low" so often heard on the field, a good exemplification of which is presented here. To the football enthusiast the tackle is ideal.

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE

republic to make the next move.

It is said here that Colombia will at least protest against the action of the United States ships and marines, which she will claim prevented her from suppressing the revolution. She is also likely to recall her representative at Washington. She may even go so far as to characterize the course of the United States upon the isthmus as the acts of an unfriendly nation, with a demand for redress and war as an alternative. Progress in this drama is hampered by the difficulties of communication between Bogota and the rest of the world. War with the United States would, of course, prove futile, with nothing to be gained on either side, the geographical difficulties favoring Colombia and tending to prolong the campaigns and increase the death rate. Another cause of delay is the lack of complete confidence between Dr. Herran and his government. In this connection it is a fact that that diplomat knew a revolution was pending on the isthmus six months ago, and at that time notified Bogota, but in deference and some unguessed feeling on the part of the Colombian government, prevented any use of that information. When the new republic shall have established a permanent government it is probable that this country will appoint a minister to Panama. That minister will likely be Mr. Gudge, present consul general at Panama, as he is the person most familiar with the new country.

New York, Nov. 7.—Six men located for a time in this city formed the plans that resulted in the revolution on the isthmus of Panama. The men are Senor F. Murtis Duran, until recently governor of Panama, J. N. Duque, editor of the Star and Herald; Robinson Tracey, G. Lewis, Dr. Manuel Amador and Don Asomede Pomana. The men who held the fate of Panama in their hands met at the Hotel Hygeia No. 37 West 26th street. All but Senor Duran have now gone to Panama to take part in the reorganization of the new government. Senor Duran declined to discuss the situation in Panama, but Colombians in this city favorable to the new government say Duran is likely to be the first president of the republic of Panama. Senor Duran is 60 years old, handsome and vigorous looking, alert and presenting much the same appearance of a well to do New York man. He is a lawyer and for seven years was chief justice of the supreme court of Colombia.

He is a native of Bogota and was a member of the Colombian Congress in 1880. He has resided in Panama for 20 years.

After the customary devotional exercises, a beautiful solo was rendered by Mrs. C. W. Miller, and was followed by a regular program prepared by the Philadelphia board, interspersed with prayers and readings. The special prayers were made by Miss Alice Ball, Mrs. John Dean, Mrs. Edwin Wood and Miss Clara Knight. The readings were "A plea for greater consecration," by Miss May Miller; a poem on the same theme by Mrs. James Thomas, and a leaflet, "A Story of a Gift," by Mrs. W. D. Fulton. After the program a social season with its dainty refreshments was enjoyed.

RESCUE HOME RECEPTION.

A very pleasant day was spent at the Rescue Home October 29, by the many friends of the work, and a goodly amount of provisions were brought, or sent by the merchants of the city. For those helpful tokens of their sympathy and goodwill we are most thankful.

With the coming month, December, the subscriptions so kindly made by many citizens of Newark, for the work of our Rescue Home expire.

While we have not accomplished all that we had hoped for, during the past year, yet we feel that a good foundation has been laid and not a little practical work done.

We trust that our friends will be willing to remember their subscrip tions, for the coming year and that others who have not heretofore ex pressed an interest in our work will feel led to help us.

We have this honor that our labor is not vain in the Lord.
(Signed) Sec. Bnd. of Managers.

Jar Exploded.

C. C. Kaley was opening a glass jar of fruit for supper at Utica when the jar collapsed and the glass cut his right hand severely. Dr. Smith who was called to attend him, says it is the worst cut up hand from so slight a cause that he ever saw. There are six cuts in it, and several pieces of glass were extruded by the surgeon. Mr. Kaley will be laid up for some time.

CHRISTMAS.

Is coming so while you have a little time to spare, come to Munson's and see some of the big bargains they will offer you, for the stock is large and fresh from their respective factories. We guarantee every instrument. Cash or easy payments. Munson's Music Co. 27 West Main.

Explosion of Gas.

Gas leaks are not nice things to have lying around loose, says the Utica Herald. Last Wednesday evening a Fuel Supply main burst a short dis tance above Hugh Bell's place in Morgan township. Ed Bickler came along about 8 o'clock on his bicycle and when he ran into the escape gas an explosion occurred and Bickler's face was severely scorched. Ed went to Mr. Bell's telephone and notified the Fuel Supply people and gates in the line were soon closed and about midnight the fire went out the gas be tween the gates having all burned.

H. P. SCOTT TALKS

Giving Statement as to the Bank Transactions-- Business Proceeding in a Normal Way-- Scott Goes to New York City.

In the presence of a reputable wit ness this noon, Harry P. Scott, the former intimate friend of Cashier Harry J. Hoover, gave an interview to The Ad vocate, relating his connection with Hoover's misdoings and incidentally to deny the allegations made by Hoover night before last concerning himself. Scott said:

"Harry Hoover and I have been staunch friends from boyhood. We were schoolmates and grew to man hood together. We were associated in business and in social affairs. While Hoover was bookkeeper and assistant cashier in the People's National bank, I was there part of the time as book keeper.

"It was while Hoover was in San Francisco at the time the battleship Ohio was launched that I attended to his work in the bank, and it was then that I found myself unable to strike a balance in the certificate of deposit account. Never dreaming that any thing was crooked, I asked Cashier Maylone and Bookkeeper Thompson to try to work it out, but they, like me, failed. When Hoover returned to the bank from his trip with Governor Nash I told him of my inability to make the account balance and he replied that he was not surprised, as he had kept the account himself so long and had had it transferred from one book to another so often that it might be difficult for one not familiar with the books to get things straight in a minute. He said that he would soon show that he could show things were right.

"Shortly after that Hoover took me out to Sharon valley in a buggy, as he said in his statement, and told me that things had not been right and that he wanted to tell me as little as possible, yet enough to show me that he had the way cleared to make his shortage there whole. He didn't even tell me the amount of his shortage. He said that he had been making money in the bow ling alley business, in his bicycle sundry wholesale business and in other ways. He said, too, that he had arranged for a loan that would fix it all up in short order. I was delighted that he showed this disposition to square matters and assured him that I would lend him every assistance possible. He did not go into details, but about the time the new Licking County bank was organized a year ago last spring he said to me that he would pay it back to the bank, as he had affairs all arranged. He said, however, that he didn't want me to be implicated in any way and that he wanted to make the alterations on the books himself. A few days before the bank opened, I don't recall the date, but the certificates will show, he came down about 9 p. m. with about $8,000 in currency. I told him that it was too much, that it would excite sus picion and he must return the sum in smaller amounts. Seeing the force of the argument, he took away all but about $2,000 of the money, and for this wrong in this, as I could issue a certifi cate of deposit. I saw nothing wrong in this as I could issue a certificate in any name you might ask if you had the money to pay for it. I supposed he had come by the money hon estly and never dreamed that he had taken it from the Licking bank. He told me that he would borrow some money and had some of his own. I had implicit confidence in him and took his word for it.

"This course was pursued for some time till he returned the sum of $30,000 to the People's bank. After a little while he brought the money down in daylight, during banking hours, and gave it to me or to Cashier Maylone. He issued certificates. Understand, he didn't always bring currency, but checks on our bank that had been de posited with the Licking. Once he brought $10,000 and was given a certificate for it.

"I asked him if he had destroyed the certificates issued by the People's bank at the time he personally marked the stubs 'paid.' Looking at me, he said: 'Scott, do you think I am a fool? Of course I destroyed those certificates. I wouldn't keep them over night.'

"When it was all paid in, I was as happy as Hoover could possibly have been. Little did I know that he had lifted the load in one bank and placed it in another.

"The defalcation of the past few years had been made good and I was sure he had come by the money to set tle it honestly.

"Last spring I went to work in the Licking bank. I found the same state of affairs there that I had found at the People's. More than this, Hoover had borrowed from the bank and had given his unsecured notes. These the direc tors, of course, found and, demanding security, he turned over his $20,000 life insurance policies and made all restitu tion possible. What he turned over was far in excess of his known liabil ity to the bank at that time, but when he was told to take a vacation and go west with Director J. K. Hamill, the directors went to work, and at a certain point, when I found it could not longer be concealed, I told the story of how it had been done.

"Hoover came back from Denver, where he had gone after leaving French Fork Springs, and took to his bed. The building had been transferred to Ham ill and people were talking, saying, many of them, things that would injure the bank. One day I went to Hoover's residence, as he relates and did tell him that we had come to the parting of our ways. I had done enough for him. I demanded that he resign and go west or I would tell what I knew about the bank. It may have been in the form of a threat, but I wanted him away for his own good, for my own, for the good of the bank. It is true that it is probable I would have been made cashier.

"Hoover denounced me as a traitor and said he would not resign and that I might say what I pleased. A little later, last Tuesday, he turned over to the Licking bank directors the $30,000 certificates which I supposed had been destroyed. The People's bank books show that they are paid. The record is in Hoover's writing.

"Now, if I have done something il legal I would like to know it. I am ready to take the consequences. I simply shielded my friend when I thought he was my friend and enabled him to square his shortage with the People's out of funds by which I had every rea son to believe he came by honestly. He had, as I thought, made money. He was, I know, in position to borrow a large sum, for everybody will admit that his credit was first class and that he was surrounded by good and sub stantial men in the new bank.

"That is about all I have to say at present. I expect to go down to New York today for a short rest. My wife is in New York at present with Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Griggs.

As the People's bank officials have declined to pay the $30,000 in certifi cates, which their books show to be marked "paid," the Licking bank will try to force collection. Again, let it be said that the People's has $35,000 sur plus and undivided profits with which to pay this $30,000 if it should come to that. This means that the bank is perfectly safe.

The Licking bank is fully protected. The directors personally, in the pres ence of men from the other Newark banks, paid $24,000 to make the bank straight.

Business today at both banks has gone along in a normal way. There is no excitement. Hoover is very sick. There is no thought of making arrests at this time, as the question of settling the differences between the two banks is the first consideration.

RESIGNATION

OF HARRY HOOVER IS CARRIED TO THE GOVERNOR

By F. M. Black Saturday and the Same is Reluctantly Accepted by Gov. Nash.

A special dispatch to the Advocate Saturday afternoon from Columbus an nounces the resignation of Harry J. Hoover as trustee of the Gallipolis State Hospital as follows:

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—Frederic M. Black came over from Newark today and was closeted with Governor Nash for an hour. Later the chief executive announced that Mr. Black had brought over the resignation of Harry Hoover as trustee of the State Hospital for Epileptics and that he had accepted it. This the Governor said he did reluc tantly, as Mr. Hoover had discharged his duties as member of the Board of Trustees with ability and honor. He sent home with Mr. Black a letter to Mr. Hoover expressing the same senti ment given out for publication.

RAID ORDERED.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Angered by the revelations before the "graft" investi gation committee, Mayor Harrison this afternoon sent out 20 detectives with blanket orders to raid every gambling house in Chicago. The order is the most sweeping of the kind that has emanated from the city hall in years, and some sensational chapters to the moral spasm that is now shak ing Chicago from center to circumfer ence are expected. Heretofore when a raid was planned some one on the in side tipped it off and the gamblers escaped.

MESSENGER MURDERED.

Texas, Nov. 7.—Express Messenger Thomas Copeland, a non union man, who took a striker's place with the Pacific Express company, was assassinated last night in his car while unloading freight. The assassins escaped on horseback. Sheriff Morris is in pursuit with a posse and hoodlums. It is not thought Copeland was killed as a sequel to the strike. He was recently acquitted on the charge of murder at Bassett and friends of his victim had sworn vengeance. This makes the third assassination at Bas sett within five years in which the vic tims were express messengers.

Died in Jail.

Versailles, Ky., Nov. 7.—George Honaker, 40, under sentence of life impris onment for beating his wife, died in jail Friday. The post-mortem disclosed a mass of short pieces of steel wire in the stomach. Honaker had threatened to commit suicide. The court of ap peals recently reversed the lower court's verdict and Honaker would soon have had a re-trial.

LODGE NEWS

G. I. A. to B. of L. E.

Crisswell Division, No. 41, G. I. A. to B. of L. E., held their annual inspec tion on Thursday afternoon at their hall. The division was inspected by Mrs. Ella Kuhn, of Columbus. Mrs. Kuhn praised the ladies of the division for the excellence of their work, after which Mrs. Frank Howard, the pres ident, presented Mrs. Kuhn with a handsome lunch cloth, which was re ceived with pleasure by Mrs. Kuhn. At the conclusion of the work of the lodge a beautiful supper was partaken of, after which a pleasant social time was had, remarks of an interesting nature being made by visiting brothers and sisters of Division No. 36. Dancing was then engaged in and continued for some time, when the visitors left on the midnight train for their homes having had a fine time.

Masonic.
Farmers' Lodge, No. 153, F. & A. M., Fredonia, has elected the following of ficers: W. M., C. M. Stout; S. W., Geo. E. Smith; J. W., John M. Lake; treas urer, T. N. Carpenter; secretary, A. L. Barrick; S. D., F. A. Carpenter; J. D., R. H. Saxton; S. S. Geo. W. Saxton; J. S., R. Dunlap; Tyler, Charles Pimm.

At the regular meeting of Newark Lodge, No. 97, F. & A. M., held on Fri day night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

D. O. K. K.
At the regular meeting of Kootah Temple next Tuesday night final ar rangements will be made for the initia tion of a class of tyros on Tuesday, December 1. A large class is promised and members are requested to be pres ent and help push it along.

The meeting of the Ohio Association of the D. O. K. K. at Findlay last week was a great success. Reports from all quarters showed the order to be in a flourishing condition. At the ceremonial session in the evening 29 candidates were initiated. The initia tion was preceded by a grand parade with fireworks, in which 500 members of the order took part. The affair created a good deal of enthusiasm in the city of Findlay, and will result in a considerable growth of the order in that part of the state.

The D. O. K. K. is particularly de signed to create a broader and better acquaintance among Pythians, furnish ing a middle ground upon which the members of different lodges can meet, thus breaking down lines of separation that may exist between the member ship of different lodges.

Odd Fellows.

The regular meeting of Newark Lodge, No. 623, I. O. O. F., was held on Monday night and the first degree was conferred on one candidate. There was a good attendance of the members and considerable interest is being manifested in the work at present.

At the meeting of Olive Branch, No. 34, I. O. O. F., held on Tuesday night, the second degree was conferred on two candidates, and at the meeting to be held on next Tuesday night the initia tory degree will be conferred on two candidates.

American Protective Union.

Newark Council, No. 1, held their regular meeting on last Monday evening in the A. P. U. hall, Opera House block, with a large attendance of the members. A class of new candidates were initiated in the fire degree.

A lecture to the ladies will be given at this hall on Tuesday, November 10, at 2 p. m., which will be very interest ing and instructive.

All mothers and daughters invited to attend. Admission free.

Bankers' Fraternal Union.

Newark Council, No. 42, Bankers' Fraternal union, held an open session of special importance at their council hall Thursday evening. The members of the council and their friends assem bled for the purpose of listening to re marks from some of the supreme and state officers of the order, and a musical entertainment also, for the purpose of organizing a ladies' degree team, and a general good time. The program was informal and consisted in part as fol lows: A fine musicale on the piano, rendered by Mr. Clyde Humrickhouse, assisted in part by Mr. Will Spitzer, of Kenton, O. The gentlemen did splen did execution and were highly applauded by the audience.

The Hon. George H. Chamberlain, state council president for Ohio, was introduced to the audience and delivered a splendid address, taking for his subject, "Fraternal Insurance." Bro. Chamberlain is a fine speaker and handled the subject well and was highly appreciated by all.

Supreme Deputy Bernard, of Cleve land, was next called for and responded in a fine manner, taking for his subject in part the lodge workers. Bro. Ber nard excited considerable enthusiasm and his remarks were well taken. He has consented to remain in Newark for a few days and assist the members in building up the council. The chairman of the meeting next introduced Bro. Dr. Lowery, supreme outer guard and pres ident of Cambridge council. Benevo lence, fraternity and unity were the subjects chosen by Dr. Lowery. All were deeply interested in the illustra tions and happenings which were used in painting a bright picture of his sub jects. At the close of the doctor's re marks, the ladies of Newark Council opened the doors of the banquet hall and all were welcomed to partake of a fine luncheon, and it goes without say ing there was something doing. After luncheon Bro. Lowery called for volun teers to take up the work of organizing a ladies' degree team. In a very few minutes sixteen ladies were secured and the grand march to success started. Bro. Lowery is a very able drill master and produced some very fine floor fig ures and all were delighted in the man ner he placed the work and handled the team. At the close of the meeting the friends wished the council success and many returns of the evening. Su preme Deputy Bernard placed in the hands of the council secretary twelve applications for membership in the or der, which he had received during the evening's entertainment.

Knights of Pythias.
Two wagon loads of Knights of Pythias went over from Centerville to Homer on Thursday night and attend the social given by the lodge of that place. The Homer boys have recently fitted up their fine castle hall and are in a contented, happy and prosperous condition.

Royal Arcanum.

At the last meeting of Bayard Tay lor council plans for the winter's work were considered, and will be completed at the meeting next Monday evening. There will be other matters of impor tance to be considered and a full at tendance of the members is desired.

Modern Woodmen of America.

Despite the fact that the most of the officers of Cedar Camp, Modern Wood men of America, were absent, the 65 members present had a very enjoy able time. Eight applications were ballotted upon and accepted, and Rob ert Revercomb, R. J. Berkshire and R. A. Cunningham were initiated into the order.

The first of the year being the 21st anniversary of the foundation of the Modern Woodmen of America a com mittee was appointed to make ar rangements to celebrate that event and a good time will be had by the mem bers about the first of the year.

GYM. SOCIAL

Newark Members of Y. M. C. A. Given a Great Treat Friday Night—Co-Jumbus Visitors Present.

The young men who gathered in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night were given a real treat in the exhibition of gymnastic work, in class and on upparatus, by Mr. F. B. Wise, and his class of leaders from the Columbus Y.
M. C. A. Mr. Wise is himself an expert gymnast and the young men under his training have acquired surprising ability. It was an object lesson to all who were interested in physical training of what may be accomplished through systematic training.
At the completion of that part of the program, the social committee served hot cocoa, wafers and apples to those present. The general secretary then introduced Mr. Wise who spoke briefly of how he came to enter the work and what he considers the real value of physical training. He was followed by several members of his class who explained the work as it is done in the Columbus association.

Several members of the local association were then called on, among them Mr. Frank C. Beggs, Prof. J. A.
Tait, Mr. W. V. Jordan and Physical Director Fitzgerald.

After extending a unanimous vote of thanks to the Columbus friends for their visit and exhibition, the meeting broke up into an informal social.

Sargent's trio, consisting of harp, flute and violin, discoursed sweet music throughout the evening.

Taken all in all the "Gym Social" was quite a success, and will result, we are sure, in a large interest being taken in all the various classes and departments of the gymnasium work.

There are now somewhat over 140, 000 students in our colleges, universities and technical schools, and somewhat over 50,000 students in our professional schools of theology, law and medicine.

MISSION

To be Held at Trinity Church Next Week—What the Rector Has To Say.

To the People of Newark.

My Dear Friends—Permit me to say a few words to you personally about the Mission to be held in Trinity church next week. I have arranged to have this Mission for a definite purpose, which cannot be carried out without your co-operation. Therefore I ask you kindly to consider the following statements:

1. I am the rector of Trinity parish but am not content to minister only to those people who are already members while I know that there are hundreds of others outside the pale of church membership and many who are not brought into contact with any religious influences at all. I am unable to rid myself of the responsibility, which my calling as a minister of Christ lays upon me, to extend the privileges of His church to all people. You reader, whoever you may be, you are one of those whom I earnestly wish to bring under the spiritual influence of our Saviour's kingdom.

2. I believe that anybody, without any possible exception, can become a true and faithful follower of our Blessed Lord and therefore that those excuses, which some of you make for not trying are utterly false and unworthy of that manhood, which after all you hold in common with Christ himself.

3. Most men—and I suppose, really all men—do intend some day to think about their soul's salvation and to take the necessary measures to secure it.
But do you not see how the days and the months and the years are slipping by and you still neglect it? This matter is of supreme importance and you will never attend to it if you go on in this way. Therefore I ask you to attend to it now. This is the way in which I want you to co-operate with me in making the Mission answer the purpose for which it is held. I want you to come and hear Dr. Lloyd preach.
The seats in the church will seat all free. There will be no collection. You will not be required to do anything embarrassing. Come as often as you can, but try particularly to come on Monday night. Believe me, faithfully yours,
G. W. VAN FOSSEN.

INVESTIGATE.

And when you see such pianos as the Knabe, Blusins, Behr, Shoninger, Vose & Sons, Regent, and some others we handle, you will then understand why we have so much confidence in the instruments we carry. They have proven themselves. Do not forget who carries these pianos, but come to 27 West Main street, and we will take pleasure in showing you their merits. Munson

The Best Remedy for Croup.

(From the Atchison, Kan. Daily Globe)
This is the season when the woman who knows the best remedies for croup is in demand in every neighborhood.
One of the most terrible things in the world is to be awakened in the middle of the night by a whoop from one of the children. The croup remedies are almost as sure to be lost in case of croup, as a revolver is sure to be lost in case of burglars. There used to be an old fashioned remedy for croup known as hive syrup and tolu. But some modern mothers say that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is better, and does not cost so much. It causes the patient to "throw up the phlegm" quicker, and gives relief in a shorter time. Give this remedy as soon as the croupy cough appears, and it will prevent the attack. It never fails and is pleasant to take. For sale by all druggists.

Noah Andregg, the insurance agent, has removed his place of business to
No. 19 1/2 North Third street, first stairway south of Doty house, in same office as Franklin's insurance agency.
On account of sickness my business will be looked after by Franklin's insurance agency.

GOVERNOR NASH

Will Not Request the Resignation of Harry J. Hoover as Trustee of Hospital.

Columbus, O., Nov. 7.—Gov. Nash was asked Friday whether he would ask for the resignation of Harry J. Hoover as trustee of the Gallipolis state hospital for epileptics. He said he would not.

The governor said that Mr. Hoover had not harmed the state as an official or committed any malfeasance in his office, and there was no reason for asking him to resign. He knew nothing more about the affair than he had read in the newspapers. He added: "I am not going to convert my office into a bank examiner."

Disastrous Wrecks.

Carelessness is re-ponsible for many a railroad wreck and the same causes are making human wrecks of sufferers from Throat and Lung troubles. But since the advent of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, even the worst cases can be cured, and hopeless resignation is no longer necessary. Mrs. Lois Cragg of Dorchester, Mass., is one of many whose life was saved by Dr. King's New Discovery. This great remedy is guaranteed for all Throat and Lung diseases by Frank D. Hall, druggist.
Price 50c. and $1.

THREE BRIGHT STARS ON MISSOURI'S TEAM

Columbia, Mo., Nov. 7.—Missouri university is determined to make a desperate effort to land the western championship. This year she will contest with Kansas and Nebraska and then play one game with Michigan. Missouri's star players are Hans Wolff, right end; R. H. Jesse, son of the president of the university, left tackle, and H. W. Anderson, fullback. This is young Jesse's third year on the team and he is the headiest, nerviest and coolest football tactician in the middle west. Missouri's team will average about 180 pounds; 10 pounds lighter than Kansas' and about five pounds heavier than Nebraska's team.

AS TO TEMPERANCE.

A NEW ALCOHOL DANGER TO WO-MEN AND CHILDREN—A WARN-ING ABOUT PATENT MEDICINES

In the manufacture of a well-known patent medicine, 250 barrels of alcohol are used weekly. The bottles containing this so-called medicine hold a little less than a pint. If the mixture was made up of one-half alcohol, it would require 168,000 bottles a week to dispose of this weekly consumption of alcohol. These are facts which make it easy to understand to what proportion alcohol is used to produce an intoxicating compound sold under false pretences as "medicine."

Dangerous as such a preparation is to the health and morals of the people, it is made many times more so by the addition of nerve-deadening and poisonous drugs—narcotics and opiates—used because they produce an immediate effect, regardless of the fact that they are injurious in the extreme.

Preparations of this kind find their way into homes where temperance is preached, and where intemperance is looked upon with horror. It is not difficult to understand how under these circumstances home influence and wise teaching is undermined, and the appetite for alcohol and strong drink created. Then, too, the opium, morphine, cocaine and other opiates, (used in these preparations because they temporarily paralyze the functions of the nerves), destroy the entire nervous system, and wreck the brain. They do more; they are responsible for creating the deadly drug habit, which has enslaved as mental and physical wrecks thousands of unfortunates.

Nearly all patent medicines and so-called cough cures depend for their effect upon some form of these drugs.
That is one reason why doctors are opposed to patent medicines. It is a good reason, too, when victims of the ready drug habit are crowding the sanitariums and insane asylums.

We repeat that those selling these so-called "immediate relief" remedies, stimulants disguised under the name of medicine, should be compelled by law to print the formula on each package, telling what it contains. We have written this so you will realize the danger in taking such preparations, and so you will understand its importance when you read that without these drugs, or alcohol, Father John's Medicine cures colds and all throat and lung troubles—and build up the body. It is the best tonic ever prescribed, because it drives out the impurities in the only way they can be driven out, by enabling the stomach to assimilate the food and thus strengthen each organ of the body to do its natural work. This old remedy is not a patent medicine, as we have said before. It was prescribed for the late Rev. Father John O'Brien, of St.

Patrick's Parish, Lowell, Mass., fifty years ago, from whom it derived its name, and by whom it was recommended. It contains no opium, morphine, chloroform, or poisonous drugs in any form. Its ingredients are all pure food elements. The 5¢ bottles contain three times the quantity of the 50-cent size.

Father John's Medicine sold in Newark at Collins' Drug Store.

The funeral of Joseph Kelvey, who dies at his home about one-half mile south of the village, on Wednesday, took place from his late home on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, the Rev.
Mr. Work, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. The deceased was a veteran of the civil war, and the old soldiers of the village turned out in a body. The interment was made in Maple Grove cemetery.

The Denison football team left for Wooster this morning where they are contesting for honors with the team of Wooster university today. The second team left for Mt. Vernon to go up against the High school team of that place.

SACRED

Concert at Taylor Hall Sunday Afternoon Followed by Address by Dr.
Beardsley.

All who heard the sacred concert
two weeks ago Sunday in Taylor Hall will be delighted to know that the mixed quartet which furnished such excellent music will again give the concert tomorrow. The following musicians will participate: Miss Sara Erna Stranathan, soprano; Miss Elsie Hirschberg, contralto; Mr. Thomas Phillips, tenor; Mr. Guy Crippen, basso; Miss Jennie E. Blinn, accompanist.

The address will be by Dr. Beardsley.
This will be Dr. Beardsley's last lecture in Newark, and will be for men only. Taylor Hall should be filled tomorrow to hear him. The sacred concert begins at 3 o'clock. Dr. Beardsley speaks at 7:30.

After the big meeting the Bible Study Groups under the leadership of Rev. L. S. Boyce, Mr. J. B. Jones and Prof. J. A. Tait, convenes. The subject of tomorrow's study will be "How Christ Influenced Men."

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Has won success far beyond the effect of advertising only.

The secret of its wonderful popularity is explained by its unapproachable Merit.

Based upon a prescription which cured people considered incurable.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Unites the best-known vegetable reinedies, by such a combination, proportion and process as to have curative power peculiar to itself.

It cures of scrofula, eczema, psori-asis, and every kind of humor, as well as catarrh and rheumatism—prove

the best blood purifier ever produced.

Morning subject, "The Need of Spiritual Vision"; evening, "The Life that Now Is." Prayer meeting and Sunday school teachers' hour Wednesday night at 7 o'clock.

St. Francis de Sales.

The mission by the Passionists will continue for another week. The following is the order of the services for tomorrow: First mass 7, second 10; this will be a high mass and Father Alexander will preach at this mass. In the evening there will be a lecture on Confession by Father Gabriel. As this will be one of the most important discourses of the mission a very large audience will certainly be present, and those who wish to have choice seats to hear this great preacher, should be in the church not later than 7:15. The evening services begin at 7:20. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

The Cooking club met with Miss Margery Collins Saturday evening. A change in the program was made by having a Halloween party. The game of the evening was a Spider Web, at the end of which each one found her fortune. A delicious Halloween supper was served in ancient Halloween style.

CARNEGIE

Pays Into City Treasury of New York the Sum of $141,367 in the Form of Tax.

New York, Nov. 7.—Andrew Carnegie has paid into the city treasury his tax on $10,000,000. This is the full amount of his assessment, both on personality and real estate and puts Mr. Carnegie far in the lead of other taxpayers as to the amounts contributed to the city.

Two checks, aggregating $141,367 were received from Carnegie in payment of his tax. Such an enormous sum for personality exceeded all former valuations, even that put on the property of William Waldorf Astor before he renounced his citizenship. No intimation came from Mr. Carnegie that he desired a cut. Officials of the tax department consider the example set by Mr. Carnegie as worthy of high praise.

POPE'S PLAN.

Rome, Nov. 7.—It is learned that the Pope is studying a project submitted to him by Cardinal Moran, the object of which is the withdrawal of America and Australia from the jurisdiction of the congregation of the propaganda. The project provides a kind of autonomy for the two countries under the responsibilities of their respective cardinals.

Their dependence on Rome will be merely on questions of dogma. It seems the pope is inclined to take the steps proposed as a result of the increase of disputes among the clergy of the two countries which the propaganda has been unable to settle, and also because of a lack of familiarity on the part of the propaganda with local feeling in the countries concerned.

TRAIN WRECKED

Frankfort, Ind., Nov. 7.—A west-bound Clover Leaf passenger train running between Toledo and St. Louis, due here at 8:30 this morning, ran into an open switch just outside of town while running twenty miles an hour, and turning completely over, rolled down a fifteen foot embankment and slid a train length on the roofs of the coaches. There were 20 passengers aboard and all were more or less injured, but so far as known none fatal. Conductor Huntington of Toledo, sustained fractured ribs and internal injuries.

PROJECT

TO BUILD BIG AUDITORIUM IN NEWARK.

Meeting Will Be Held by Those Interested Soon—The Hall to Seat 5,000 People.

A project is on foot by a number of Newark's most substantial and enterprising citizens for a new public improvement that will be of the greatest value to the city. It is intended to erect a large and modern market house in the central part of the city for the accommodation of a first class market—a thing that the public generally needs. In connection with the market house an immense auditorium will be erected over the market house twice as large as the old rink, and capable of accommodating at least 5,000 people. The idea of the projectors of the improvement is to form a joint stock company, in which the public generally can take stock to any amount desired. The proposed building will be an ornament and a credit to the city, and the new market place is certainly indispensable needed, as there is no market place in our large and rapidly growing city at present, and both buyer and seller are exposed to all times to the inclemency of the weather. Since the conversion of the rink and old opera house to other uses, Newark, a city at present of 22,000 inhabitants, has absolutely no place for a large public gathering, such as political meetings, conventions of all sorts, etc.

A meeting will be held some time the first of the week by the projectors of the enterprise, at which time further steps will be taken by them for the formation of the enterprise and the presentation of it to the public.

WHITE ELEPHANT

remind historians of the ancient wars waged between Sherman and Foraker and later between Foraker and Hanna. Meanwhile the Democratic minority in the Legislature, although a small one, will have ample opportunity to enjoy itself. It is safe to predict that the coming session of the Legislature will manufacture abundant material for the Democrats of this state to use in the coming campaign, with telling effect.

There is no doubt that the Ohio Democracy will immediately undergo a process of renovation and rejuvenation. It is no injustice to Mayor Johnson to say that the consensus of opinion in his party is agreed on the proposition that his leadership has been permanently terminated. His nearest friends, such as "Chairman" Salen, Secretary Richardson and others, acknowledge the fact, and it is very probable that Mr. Johnson himself agrees with them.

The experience of the party in 1902 and 1903 has been such as to make a new alignment of the rank and file absolutely necessary, and the necessity of it is now conceded on all sides. It is not reorganization that is demanded, but organization. There is no desire anywhere to repudiate any part of the true Democratic faith, but there is a manifest disposition among the leaders to permeate the party as a whole to pursue a moderate course in future and stick to those policies in regard to which all Democrats are agreed rather than to search for those which are inherently subjects of disagreement. The disaster of last Tuesday is like a purgative dose to the Ohio Democracy, and as soon as the recovery takes place, which will be within a very short time, the party in this state will be prepared to enter the national campaign united on common objects and with an earnest determination to win. The results of this year's election outside of Ohio are an inspiration to this endeavor. Everywhere except in Ohio the Democracy has not only held its own, but has made substantial gains. There is no doubt that this fact will be duly appreciated in this state when the votes are analyzed and fully digested, the returns of the late election, and there is every probability that the Democrats of Ohio will henceforth be in full sympathy and accord with their brethren throughout the country.

However much Boss Hanna may protest, he can no longer be disregarded as a presidential quantity. Mr. Hanna has never played the hypocrite more than in his attitude toward this subject. The real reason why he was opposed to Roosevelt's endorsement by the Republican state convention was because he wanted the nomination himself. He admitted as much to intimate friends at Chillicothe while in attendance upon the Republican opening. The course of events seemed for a time to eliminate him from the presidential problem, but the result of the election in Ohio has restored him to a more prominent position in that connection than he ever occupied before. Every trust and every moneyed interest in the country will be for Hanna for president, if he lives, and the peculiar public sentiment that always attaches itself to the victor in politics will be with him in every state of the Union. President Roosevelt today has a weaker grip upon the national situation than at any time in the past, and if Mr. Hanna himself does not become the candidate of his party for president in 1904 he is very likely to name the candidate, in which case it will not be Roosevelt.

Squire Samuel Smith, a prominent citizen of McKean township, was in the city on Saturday.

WEEK'S Society and Club EVENTS

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Neal entertained on Friday evening with a dinner party in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Van Fossen and Mrs. F. F. Kibler, of Hillsboro. Those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Neal's hospitality were: Mr. and Mrs. Van Fossen, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Fleck, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas, Mrs. F. F. Kibler and Judge Kibler.

Mrs. Ella Updegraff entertained on Thursday afternoon with a perfectly appointed euchre. At five o'clock an elegant course dinner was served. At the close of the game the prizes were awarded to Mrs. G. W. Van Fossen and Mrs. Stephen Ashton, of Granville; Mrs. Nicholas Emmert and daughter, Jessie; Mrs. Thomas Goff, Mrs. Henry Ashton, Mrs. Lewis James, of this city, and Mrs. James Dickinson, of Riverside.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Helmke on Case avenue Wednesday evening in the way of a surprise to inform Mrs. Helmke that it was her birthday anniversary. All came with well-filled baskets, and after a sumptuous supper, music and games were enjoyed. Those present from out of town were: Mrs. Ina Ashton, of Springfield, Ill.; Mr. and

A Youthful Coiffure

To dress the hair simply and becomingly is one of the secrets of the debutante's youthful charm. Here is shown a high coiffure for a young girl. The hair is slightly wavy. The front hair drops over the forehead, the sides are not drawn so tightly that the wave of the hair is destroyed, the hair is combed to the top of the head where the ends are rolled in three soft loops, each kept soft and fluffy. No hair ornament is worn.

Miss Alice McCune. Among the players were: Mesdames S. M. Hunter, W. C. Miller, Frank Symons, Judson Lewis, Fred King, James Fitzgibbon, Fred Wright, Fred Sites, Anson White, Richard Collins, J. Howard Jones, William Macey, Frank Bartholomew, G. W. Van Fossen, John Carroll, A. C. Dickinson, Gardner, Smiley, Robert Davidson, Goldsborough, Malliou, Ernest Johnson, Thomas Montgomery, Albert Rosebraugh; Misses Nellie and Alice McCune, Helen Goldsborough, Jessie King, Elizabeth Thomas, Louise Speer, Edith Thomas, Nina Webb, Louise Hunter, Jessie and Mary Robbins and Kathryn Symons.

Mrs. George L. Starrett will entertain with a euchre party on Wednesday afternoon next and a thimble party Thursday afternoon for Mrs. William M. Smith, of Washington, D. C.

On Thursday evening Mrs. Julia A. Benedict celebrated her eighty-eighth birthday by giving a family dinner party. There were also present Mrs. W. Wisewell and Mrs. C. L. Gary, of Zanesville.

Miss Alice Burch entertained on Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Edward Hibbert, who will soon go to California to make her home. The evening's entertainment consisted of music, fan tan and other games.

Miss Mary Fulton entertained on Saturday evening at her home on the Cherry Valley road in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hartshorn.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Sarah Shrock and Mr. Arthur H. Harris was solemnized at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mary Stasel, on Summit street, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Only the immediate relatives were present, Rev. B. F. Patt, of the Fifth Street Baptist church, officiating. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served.

After visiting with Newark relatives and friends a few days, Mr. and Mrs. Harris will leave on Monday for their future home in Las Vegas, New Mexico, where Mr. Harris owns a large ranch.

Miss Helen Knisely entertained on Saturday evening with a Halloween party. The house was artistically and appropriately decorated and games suitable to the occasion were enjoyed.

In the searching contest the prize was awarded Miss Ruth Hatch. The guests present were: Misses Verona Martin, Ruth Hatch, Lynn Shaffer, Alice Barker, Helen Abbott, Grace Flatto, Mabel Moore, Faith Roe, Mabel Jones, Bessie Taafel, Anna and Lillian Mehl, Florence Herschberger and Helen Watkins.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Wilson gave a Halloween party for their son, Master Stanley.

The house was appropriately decorated with jack o'lanterns, corn stalks and autumn leaves. Taffy was pulled, corn popped, apples bobbed for and other games suitable for Halloween were played. The guests present were:

Leonora Phillips, Corinne Miller, Marguerite Matticks, Bernice Hatch, Edythe Hall, Grace Wilson, Brown Shrader, Charles Kibler, Emerson Brillhart and Raymond Matticks.

The first meeting of the Alternate Pedro club was held on Monday evening at Miss Jessie King's. A choice luncheon was served after the game. Miss Ruby Franklin and Mr. Wayne Collier received the prizes. The players were: Misses Mary Haight, Ruby Franklin, Elizabeth and Hazel Thomas, Cassie Hillier, Jessie King, Amy Franklin and Stella Howard, Messrs. Carl Dayton, Newton Bostwick, Charlie Matthews, Harry Browne, Paul, Shepard, Fred Gleichauf, Wayne Collier and Dr. Anderson.

The Albertas gave one of their charming dances at Brennan's hall Thursday evening. A choice supper was served during the evening. Among the merry dancers were: Misses Mary Haight, Ethel Brillhart, Hazel Thomas, Shirley Pitzer, Lucile Harrington, Cassie Hillier, Stella Howard, Roxanna Allen, Helen Jones, Justina Gleichauf, Bessie Reid, Marian Hatch, Ruby Jones, Martha Schindel, Ruth Allen, Verona Martin, Addie Jones, Frances Priest, Lillian Miller, Musa Beall, Ruth Hatch, Marie Lida, Bright Hillard, Emma Maylone, Maggie Dell Nichols, Kate Vance, Anna Davis, Goldie McCann, Glenna Cramer, Miss Garrison, Wheeling, W. Va.; Miss Arnold, West Virginia; Misses Moore and Marlow, of Granville; Messrs. Newton Bostwick, Fred Gleichauf, Walter Davis, Albert Stuck, Carl Herman, Howard Brillhart, Albert Jones, Verne Priest, Richard Owens, Nelson Pierson, Fred Goodwin, Frank O'Bannon, Paul Franklin, Charlie Matthews, Frank Webb, Clay Van Voorhis, Clyde Crilly, Louis Blair, Charlie O'Bannon, Carl Ashe, Ed Stewart, Frank Douce, Harold Hartshorn, George Harrington, Warren Suter, Walter Dougherty, Walter Upson, Will Blood, Leonard Kelley, Harry Mackenzie, Lu Moore, Clarence Jones, Arthur Haines, Harry Ball, John Evans, Harry Spicer, Ed Davis, Homer Howard, Frank McQueen, Wilfred Owens; Messrs. Fred Moore and John Westcott, of Granville. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Jones.

The Monday Talks met this week with Mrs. R. F. Collins at her home on Hudson avenue. After roll call and the preliminary work, the following program was rendered:

What our tourists saw of Genoa, the Superb, with additions by Martha Wright. Something none of us have seen at Carrara, Susan D. Halsey. A Relic of Bygone Song and Story, described by Sarah Seymour. A tale of Syracuse. A Man With a Country, by Dorothy Canfield, read by Lora Smythe. The Unity Reading Circle was entertained on Tuesday evening by Mrs. Warner. Roll call was responded to with quotations on art and industry. The following excellent program was carried out:

Arts and Crafts in American Education, September Chautauqua, Blanche Murphy. Economic Stages—(a) Hunting and Fishing Stage, (b) Pastoral Stage, (c) Agricultural Stage, (d) Handicraft Stage, (e) Industrial Stage; Book I, Chap. III, Mrs. Moore.

American Sculptors and Their Art, September Chautauqua, Mrs. Fant. The Training of the Citizen, October Chautauqua, Mrs. Smith. Music, Miss Mable Glen.

The Independent Circle met at the home of Mrs. Orange Barrett on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Twelve members answered to roll call. Miscellaneous readings were given by Mrs. Mary Keagey and Mrs. Laura Barrett.

After the regular routine of business, an elegant lunch was served. Mrs. Laura Reel, Mrs. Ida Myers and Mrs. Dessie Irvin were guests of the circle. All members are requested to be present at the next meeting, which will be held at the home of Mrs. Mary Lamb, 21 Valandingham street, on the 20th of November, 1903.

One of the prettiest juvenile parties of the season was that at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walton, on West Poplar avenue on Sunday evening in honor of the christening of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Walton at the St. Francis de Sales church on Sunday afternoon. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walton and children, Lillian, George, Guy and Tillman, Mr. and Mrs. William Walton, Mr. and Mrs. John Walton and daughter, Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Walton and daughter, Miss Florence, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walton and daughters, Mr. John Jones and Miss Miller, both the latter being from Pittsburgh, and who acted as godfather and godmother of the young lady at the christening. Mr. Charles Walton, the glass blower and his estimable wife, served a fine dinner to all who observed the natal day.

Owing to a postponement of the meeting of the Review club for October 24, the program for last week was incorrect in this paper. It should have been as follows:

Hamlet, Prince of Denmark. Introduction, Ida M. Tucker. Act I, leader, Ida M. Tucker.

Current Events, Alice Fleck Miller.

The study for today was Act II of Hamlet, under the leadership of Mrs. C. A. Hatch, who reviewed the previous work and presented some new phases of the study. A short resume of the meeting of the State Federation of Woman's clubs took the place of Current Events. The club met with Mrs. Oscar Stevens.

Miss Myrtle Snider entertained the J. T. C. Thursday evening at her home on Flory avenue. A pleasant evening was spent in playing linnch. Miss Lulu Fletcher was a guest of the club.

The Whatsoever Circle of the King's Daughters has long been recognized as one of the leading charitable societies of the city. While it is not primarily a charitable organization, it has been ever ready to lend a hand or to do whatever it might find to do. Feeling that our growing city demands a broader work, the circle, under its efficient leader, Mrs. George Webb, has taken up a broader line of action. The circle has been divided into three departments. The first department, under the leadership of Mrs. Cary Legges, has charge of the emergency cupboard. This cupboard is to be supplied with every article needed in a sick room; hot water bottles, bandages, towels, sheets and clothing. These articles are to be kept in good sanitary condition and loaned or rented on a physician's recommendation. Physicians are to have access to this cupboard in cases of accident or sickness when help is needed.

The second department, with Helen Thomas as chairman, is a sewing class for children. Children are to be taught mending and plain sewing.

The third department, with Mrs. D. M. Smith as chairman, will have charge of the salesroom. Weekly sales of clothing and hats will be held. This clothing will be sold at a nominal price.

In a few weeks the ladies of this circle expect to observe Tag Day. It is hoped that the general public, who in the past, has shown the circle so many favors, will keep in mind this great day and help the ladies in the work they have undertaken.

The circle has rented a suite of rooms, Nos. 29-30 on the third floor of the Lansing Block.

The Investigators' club met on Monday afternoon with Mrs. W. C. Symons. Roll call was responded to with quotations from Alexander Pope and the following excellent program rendered:

Reading, "The Armada," Macaulay, Mrs. Ottman.

Imperial Visitors in Venice, Miss Wyeth.

Letters of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, Miss Thomas.

Current Events, Mrs. Collins. Critic, Mrs. Davis.

The guests of the club were: Mrs. Archie Stevens, Mrs. D. M. Black, Mrs. C. A. Hatch, Mrs. T. M. Edmiston and Miss Williams.

The Tuesday Afternoon Euchre club met with Miss Halsey. Mrs. Kibler, of Hillsboro, O., received the guest prize. Mrs. Albert Rosebraugh received the prize for lone hands and Mrs. R. M. Davidson the prize for programs.

The Progressive club was entertained on Wednesday afternoon by Miss Sook at her home on Hudson avenue. After roll call a short address was made by the president, Miss Sook, also a short report of the Federation was given, and the following program was carried out:

There is never a day, never an hour, spent in London, that has not its own peculiar interest.

For solid, never-ending delight, London is the city of the world.

Consumption Must be Cured by Co-Operation

The Tuberculosis Congress Advocates United Action.

stated that of the 500,000 Americans now suffering from the disease, 400,000 in the ordinary course of events would die.

And also in the ordinary course of events, if the disease runs its terrible course with these 400,000, there must be another 400,000 to take their places in the pallid ranks of the greatest destroyer of mankind, who are now unconsciously awaiting their turn.

What a theme for co-operation, when it is positively stated that it requires the most rigid co-operation, not only to fight the disease already developed and working its ravages before the eyes of all people, but to prevent the appearance of a new army of consumptives!

Happily a great campaign of co-operation, a sincere crusade against the spread and even the existence of the disease, was already under way when this paper was read, and the fact was called to the attention of the world through another able paper presented to the American Tuberculosis Congress.

With a thorough knowledge of the case of Frederick Hammann, the first American test patient sent to Professor Adolph Hoff in Vienna, an eminent medical expert, chosen because of his qualifications to write the paper, read a full report of the case to the American Tuberculosis Congress, which has been reprinted in Vol. 10, No. 2, of the Medical Legal Journal.

"It affords me considerable pleasure to present the case of Frederick Hammann to this Congress," he said, in introducing the case, "not only because this young man has been saved from an early grave, but as well to record that the same treatment which cured him is now the weapon of the greatest crusade of co-operation in the history of the warfare on consumption."

"This case holds out to the thousands of sufferers a ray of sunshine to dissipate the gloom. It presents A CURE to the great suffering mass of humanity."

While the cure of Frederick Hammann is now familiar in the history of medicine, because he was the first American cured after Professor Hoff had proved his claim in Europe, there are more remarkable cures in all the larger cities of America and in remoter quarters, chronicled from week to week by the American Bureau of the Professor Hoff Cure, which are regarded as truly miraculous in their communities.

American Bureau, Bendiner & Schlesinger, Third Avenue and 10th Street, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Please send me at once two bottles of Prof. Hoff's Cure for Consumption. I am not using all this medicine myself. Indeed, I only take the cure occasionally. I have been "passing it along" to those who need it. It is a wonderful cure.

A week ago Saturday my attention was called to a young man passing the house. He was looking thin, hollow eyed, coughed, and had grown so weak that during the day he would fall asleep at his work, exhausted. His friends and himself were "blue." I told him of what the medicine had done for me and gave him a part of my bottle. Last Saturday he stopped to have me order a bottle for him. It's all right. I only took it twice a day. I feel stronger; look at my eyes, he said.

He did look better. He and his friends had hope written all over their faces. I have two other patients who have taken a new lease of life.

Alice Higden, Ottawa, Ill.

American Bureau, Bendiner & Schlesinger, Third Avenue and 10th Street, N. Y.

Over three years ago it was conceded by my physicians and relatives and friends that I must die with consumption. A trip to California and every remedy I could buy seemed to do no good. Three times I have been so weak I could not leave the house without the aid of a cane.

I saw Hammann's case in the Chicago American and watched it through. When you announced Prof. Hoff's Cure for Consumption on sale, I at once sent for a bottle. That, I think, was the first order from this city. If you have my order on file, you will see I said I had no faith in it for a home remedy, but would give it a trial.

Well, I did. I began taking Hoff's on April 10th, 1901, and have not missed over a dozen doses to this date. It was very slow at first, and I was almost discouraged when I began to notice improvement, and about six weeks ago my physician pronounced my lungs 90 per cent. better than they were three years ago. That is pretty good. I would not be without the remedy if it cost two or three times as much as it does.

Friends who know what I was and what I am, have sent to me for your address from Arizona, Kansas and Texas and of letters from them.

Through my recommendation two leading drug stores here, J. Dunn & Co. and W. W. Morrison, now handle the remedy here, but all the local advertising it has had got from me. All the letters and wrappers I have had been given away to people who wanted to know what kind of medicine I was taking. While, as I said before, I do not claim to be well, I am able to make $2.50 per day at my trade, typesetting, and I think that is pretty good for a dead "con. sufferer."

N. B.—You can use above for advertising purposes if you desire—no part of it. I thank Hoff's is the best remedy yet on the market for Consumption, but like everything else, it must be used intelligently and given some assistance. It is no use to take a dose of medicine and then lay down and wait for it to take you out and set you upon your feet. Anything further I can do in the interest of the remedy and humanity, I will.

T. J. M.

There must be co-operation of the heartiest kind to work a great national result, and it is a great national result in the wiping out of the consumption scourge that is aimed at by Professor Hoff and the American Bureau of the Professor Hoff Cure.

Consumptives must not be regarded as marked people, to awaken a feeling of repulsion or fear. They must not regard themselves as stricken mortals who must drag themselves off the great highways of life to die in seclusion, where they must fight in the dark for a last few gasps of life.

Encouragement of the simplest kind is the first medicine that should be administered, according to the views of such eminent physicians as Dr. Mackenzie, of London; Professor Brouardel, of Paris, and all the noted doctors of America.

To cure consumption at home, Professor Hoff knew, was the only way by which a vast majority of the cases of consumption in the world might be reached. His prescription can be taken at home. To take it and to carry out the simple rules of diet and exercise does not necessarily require the attendance of a physician, and yet Professor Hoff and the American Bureau have been quick to realize that the warfare on consumption must have the hearty co-operation of the physician.

The Prof. Hoff Cure for Consumption is a HOME CURE. It is the loving care of home hands and the affectionate solicitude of home hearts which is the most valuable adjunct of the medicinal cure of consumption.

Tell the patient that he can be cured. It makes his cure much easier. Give him a big dose of encouragement. He is entitled to it, and a positive injustice is done him if he does not get it. In all truth he CAN be cured, and when this is a recognized fact by the most enlightened doctors on earth, what is to be said of the doctor who shrugs his shoulders and gives his patient up to die?

Co-operation between the patient, the physician, the friends of the consumptive and the American Bureau of the Hoff Cure will give unmeasured relief in every case, with that same chance for a cure that there is with any other disease.

Professor Hoff desires his cure to be in the hands of every sufferer. It is humanity's medicine. The prescription is compounded in accordance with Prof. Hoff's directions by the American Bureau at Third Avenue and 10th Street, New York. For the convenience of people remote from New York, the well and favorably known firm of Collins & Son Druggists have been selected to supply the remedy at $1.00 per bottle, which is exactly the price charged by the American Bureau.

The triangular trade mark of the American Bureau of Professor Hoff's Cure must be on the label, and this is the guarantee to the purchaser that it is the exact prescription used by Prof. Hoff at Vienna.

A 64-page book, containing complete descriptive treatise on the Professor Hoff Cure, and accurate reports of several hundred cases, is mailed free on application or may be obtained by calling at the well-known druggist's just named.

IMPORTANT.—Other Hoff cures not bearing this triangular trade mark are not the authentic preparation authorized by the American Bureau. You can obtain the genuine Hoff Cure at most drug stores. The great body of honorable druggists do not stoop to substitution by selling something "just as good" that means more profit to them. The genuine Hoff Cure can always be procured of the well-known druggists.

DID THE MOUND BUILDERS BRING THIS CURIOUS RELIC FROM EGYPT?

FOUND UNDER THE STUMP OF A GREAT OAK, IT REMESBLES AN ANCIENT EGYPTIAN RELIC.

THE PREHISTORIC OHIO FIND.

Birmingham, O., Nov. 7.—The prehistoric relic recently unearthed in this village by E. N. Taft is attracting renewed attention, from the fact of its resemblance to an ancient Egyptian deity; and Mr. Taft has been digging near where it was found in hopes to find the body to which it was probably once attached.

The stump measured nearly three feet in diameter. Consider the length of time it takes an oak to attain these proportions, and the years required for the decaying of an oak stump and roots, then fill in the time between maturity and decay with the number of years it may have lived and flourished, and the proof is ample that the ancient relic has lain undisturbed for centuries.

The seated figure is from a photograph of an bronze statue in the British museum said to have been an ancient Ethiopian and Egyptian deity, called Jupiter Ammon by the Latins and Zeus Amman by the Greeks.

Notice the resemblance between the two heads. The sockets show the horns and crest in the seated figure might have been attached to this head also; and the depression on the underside of the head would indicate that it was intended to rest on a narrow base.

The empty eye sockets were probably filled at one time with—what? To the student of ancient lore it requires no stretch of the imagination to see them flashing with precious stones.

It may—or may not—be a significant fact that the relic is identified with an oak; but the oak was held sacred to Jupiter because he first taught the people to live on acorns.

It is a noteworthy fact that this stone differs in utility from any found in this section of the country. Was it brought by the moundbuilders from some distant part of this continent, or even carried by them from ancient Egypt?

At least it seems to be another link in the chain of evidence which goes to prove that the "barbarians" of this country were of Egyptian origin.

A BEAUTIFUL CHICAGO WOMAN.

MRS. CARTER H. HARRISON, WIFE OF THE YOUNG MAYOR OF THE WESTERN METROPOLIS.

VIEW OF COLLEGE LIFE

Evanston (Ill.) Educator Points Out Its Evils.

SAYS ROWDYISM IS GLORIFIED.

Principal Henry L. Boltwood declares Athletic Contests Are Too Often Made the Excuse For Gambling, Drunkenness and Theft—Athletics Said to Be Injuring Secondary Schools—Fraternalists Called Bad.

"What others call meanness, rascality and cowardly brutality college men call fun."

Nearly 300 educators, practically all of them college men themselves and many of them connected with leading western universities, stood aghast at the words. But the speaker, Henry L. Boltwood, principal of the Evanston (Ill.) township high school, had even more to say, says the Chicago Tribune. He criticized college life from almost every possible viewpoint and angle. Mr. Boltwood was the last speaker at the conference of secondary schools, which recently closed in Evanston.

"Education in the early days," Mr. Boltwood began, "was the prerogative of the priests, and few probably realize how large a part of college life today is shaped by the usages and traditions of the monastery and the ecclesiastics. The dormitory, early morning prayers, the exclusion of married students, the prominence still given to logic and linguistics in the courses of study are the survival not of the fittest, but of the long established customs of the cloister."

"More generally existing, even in state universities and in others entirely divorced from the church, is the notion that college students are a privileged class and as such exempt from amenability to civil law and too often from the laws of common dignity and civility. At any rate, students are prone to think they are amenable to their faculty only, whatever may be the nature of the offenses they may commit."

"In college life and college conscience outrages which under the civil law are punished with fine and imprisonment and subject the offenders to public contempt are regarded as matters of boasting, and a false community sentiment shields offenders from exposure and punishment."

"This idea of special class privilege reaches outside of the college into the lower schools, and the rowdyism, vulgarity and theft of college men are glorified. A college athletic contest is too often made the excuse for gambling, drunkenness, theft and open robbery, plundering restaurants, defrauding railroads, interfering with the rights of the traveling public, breaking up theaters and mobbing lecturers."

"What others call meanness, rascality and cowardly brutality college men call fun. To call pilfering sports, dishonesty and soft cushions and signs 'fun' is to put on a false label, but it does not change the character of the act."

"The bazing, the mischief, the betting on athletics, the use of unscrupulous means to secure good marks or to keep on athletic teams the dishonest men whose chief merit is their proficiency in athletics, the lowering of the standard of honor in examinations, all have a corrupting influence upon preparatory schools."

"Among the bad things which the college is turning over to the secondary schools are the secret societies, which are multiplying to an extent that calls for the attention of all educators. Within ten years there have sprung up in the public schools at least a dozen Greek letter societies, which are cheap imitations of college fraternities, especially in the things in which the college fraternities are most at fault. From personal experience I find much harm and little good in these school societies. They encourage classiness and self conceit and are subversions of school and class spirit. Loyalty to the society takes the place of loyalty to the school."

"Each new society affords pretexts for additional social functions and extra expenses. School athletics suffer from the attempts of societies to give their own members prominent positions. Ridiculous and even dangerous imitations are practiced, and scholarship is left out of the question. They are utterly foreign to the equality which ought to exist in a public school, where all class distinction should be laid aside and nothing count but merit."

"The self conscious air of pride with which fraternity boys and girls ignore the outside 'barbarians,' who are often their intellectual and moral superiors, is simply exasperating. In this direction the girls are worse than the boys, or perhaps the girls feel the social slights more keenly. Mothers with tears in their eyes tell of the heartless and cruel wars in which their daughters are slighted and snubbed by the society girls."

"College athletics and college secret societies are the special features of college life which are injuring the secondary schools. The glory of the athlete has dimmed the glory of the scholar. Brawn is superior to brain in winning renown for the college and the individual. The muscular dunce or lizzard who can be kept up to a minimum grade of scholarship only by persistent coaching and presence and by much hard working on the part of the faculty is glorified."

"Five columns of newspaper glory to a game between Yale and Harvard, twenty lines to an intercollegiate debate. A great athletic victory is made the occasion for a general debauch. Not always, but far too often."

ALASKA NEEDS CHEAP TRANSPORTATION

GOVERNMENT SHOULD BUILD ROADS AT ONCE—LITTLE CHANCE FOR AGRICULTURE—THE BENEFITS OF SENATE COMMITTEE'S VISIT.

(This is the last of the series of letters by Will H. Brill, the Newspaper Enterprise Association's special advocate correspondent with the United States senate committee in Alaska.)

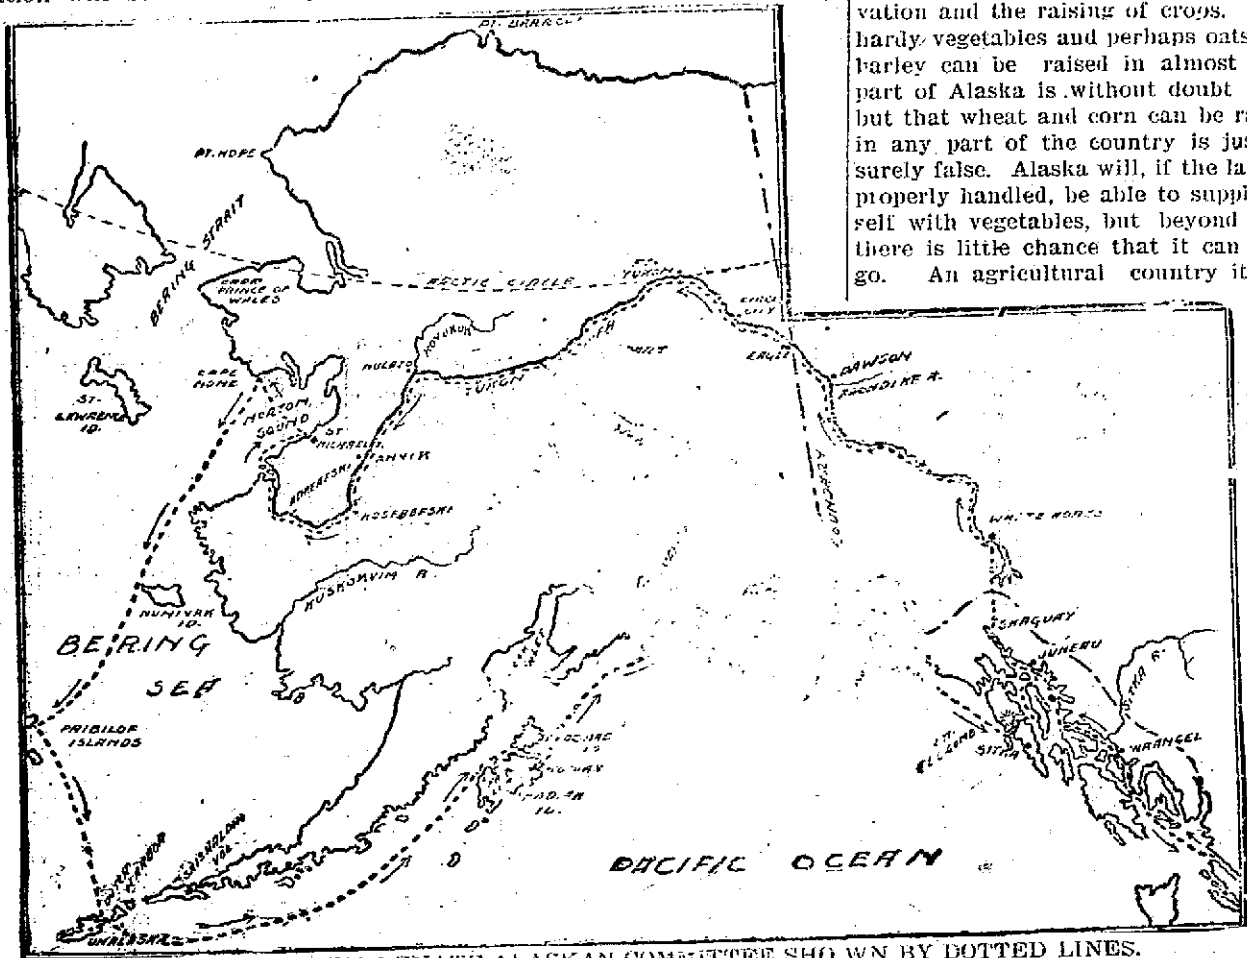

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 7.—Now that the revenue cutter McCulloch is at anchor in this harbor, and the last salute to the senatorial committee has been fired, it is not amiss to speak of the great advantages which are sure to result to Alaska from the visit.

There is little question that Alaskan legislation will be one of the promi-can easily see of what value the report of the committee will be in congress, for the members of congress knew nothing more about Alaska than you did.

What this committee will recommend for Alaska it is hard to say. The members are not talking about what their report will be; in fact, it is not likely that they have yet decided. Alaska wants representation in congress and it will probably be humored. Just how the delegate will be chosen it is hard to say. In a country of such magnificent

In addition to the good the visit of the committee will do to the people of Alaska, much interest is being aroused in the country itself. The visit of the committee will serve to show the people of the United States that Alaska is not the land of snow and ice it is popularly supposed to be, and on the other hand, it will serve to temper the claims of ambitious "boomers" who are claiming everything for the country. For instance, it will settle the claim that has been made that portions of the country are capable of high cultivation and the raising of crops. That hardy vegetables and perhaps oats and barley can be raised in almost any part of Alaska is, without doubt, true, but that wheat and corn can be raised in any part of the country is just as surely false. Alaska will, if the land is properly handled, be able to supply itself with vegetables, but beyond this there is little chance that it can ever go. An agricultural country it can nent topics before congress at its next session, and for several sessions to come. Heretofore, congress has known nothing about Alaska. The members had the usual hazy idea of the country that made it a land of snow and ice, peopled principally by polar bears. No one knew anything about the country, its climate, its physical conditions or anything else.

Therefore it was determined to send this committee to look over the country, find out its needs and its prospects. When the senate next meets four of its most trusted members will be intimately acquainted with Alaska, and will be able to talk intelligently about its affairs. The committee has done its work well. The old days of congressional junkets is over. Now committees are sent only when there is work to do, and then men are selected who will do the work. The Alaskan committee has done its work. No chance has been missed to obtain information. Many public hearings were given, and whenever a man had anything to say about the condition of the country or its needs he was listened to and questioned. His testimony was taken down by a stenographer and every word of it has been preserved. Every accessible portion of the country was visited, and special efforts were made to obtain the desired information. Men in every walk of life, from United States judges to day laborers and Indians, were questioned, and it is hard to see where any chances of obtaining information were overlooked.

It is not often that the senate is represented by a committee of such prominent senators as the Alaskan committee includes. They are Senator W. P. Dilliamham, of Vermont; Senator Henry E. Burnham, of New Hampshire; Senator Kaute Nelson, of Min-distances elections are practically impossible. It is possible that this will be arranged by the appointment of a delegate by the president, and, while this will be better than nothing, it will not fully satisfy the people.

Some of the people want a territorial form of government—this will hardly be granted at present for the population is not large enough and is too widely scattered. Some day the district will be admitted to statehood, but that will be a long time from now. The southeastern part of the country will in time be one state, the central portion another, and the southern coast a third. It is even possible delegates will be apportioned from these three parts of the country. Their interests are so widely divergent that it would be by far the better plan.

What Alaska needs most is roads. There is considerable talk about a railroad from Cook inlet or Prince William sound into the interior, but it is hard to believe that it is necessary or that it would be a profitable investment. Wagon roads are needed and should be built. It is probable that they will be. The first one that should be built is along the present military trail and the route of the telegraph line from Valdez on Prince William sound to Eagle on the Yukon. This road would open an enormous and very rich country and would give an all American route into the interior. It is more than likely that the committee will advise the building of this road. Then there are a hundred other roads that should be built. The license money now collected in Alaska is sufficient to keep these roads in repair, and if they were once built, they would be of incalculable value to the country. The miners without exception would favor a tax on mining properties if with the money never be. In some of its valleys it is possible that stock can be raised, but neither cattle nor sheep have ever been profitably raised anywhere in the country and it will be years before any advance can be made in this line, and it is not at all sure that the industry will ever prove profitable in spite of the high prices that meats command in the country.

As a matter of fact, there is hardly room for two opinions as to the future of Alaska. It is a mining country. There is a vast amount of gold in the country. As yet it has hardly been scratched over. It is more than likely that the beginning of gold mining has not yet been made. The quartz properties are practically untouched and there are thousands of acres of low grade placer ground that is not worked because of the entire lack of mining machinery. Ground that would yield enormous profits in the states is not worked at all in Alaska because of the great cost of transportation. Some day all this will be enormous. It is not likely that ground will be worked and the returns one-tenth of the country has been thoroughly prospected and hardly a day passes that strikes are not made in new territory. Mining in Alaska, however, is no longer a poor man's proposition. What is needed now is money and a great deal of it. Of course, there is always a chance for the prospector, but he must be a man willing to put up with almost unbelievable hardships, and he must be an expert in his line. Even then it is only a chance if he is successful.

What Alaska needs most of all and needs in a hurry is methods of cheap transportation. If the government will take hold of the road building, will give the miners half what the Canadian government gives those in the Klondike country, Alaska will have everything it needs for a long time to come.

WILL H. BRILL.

HE WAS FIRST TO PUT ON
"BLACK CROOK" IN AMERICA

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 7.—Historic old Greenmount cemetery, which holds the dust of Edwin Booth, received the body of another distinguished figure in the dramatic world when the remains of the late Henry C. Jarrett were laid to rest yesterday. Jarrett, who died in London, October 13, won fortune and renown from his production of the "Black Crook," which he first put on in Niblo's garden, New York. He began his long career as a theatrical manager in Baltimore in 1850. On one occasion before the war he brought from Philadelphia to this city an Uncle Tom's Cabin company. Such animosity did the play arouse here that the violent demonstration of the audience wrecked the interior of Ford's opera house, and the play had to be withdrawn summarily.

OHIOAN MARRIED STEPSISTER.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Polish last night witnessed the marriage of two of their children in St. Peter's church. The groom was Theodore Polish, son of Polish by a former marriage, and the bride was Miss Susanna Thiel, daughter of Mrs. Polish by a former marriage.

WHERE MEN GO TO THEIR DEATHS WITH SMILES ON FACES

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 7.—There are many forms of death in the man-killing anthracite mines of Pennsylvania, but only one is painless and pleasant and to only one the victims go unconsciously. In the mines there are explosions, floods, runaway cars, falling roofs, premature blasts, kicking mules, fires and many other horrible forms.

But there is one, the most unsuspecting looking death of all, that men go to with smiles on their faces, unknowing.

It is the death of the burning culm bank. Many times during the year is such a death recorded and it does not find its way into the reports of the inspectors. The season for it is now opening and on the night of Nov. 1, the first victim was numbered. Some of these great culm banks are on fire, a fire which is not to be seen at day and which at night shines only with a faint glow through the layers of ashes which separate the live coals from the outer air. It is to these burning banks that tramps and other unfortunates, forced to spend a night in the open air, go when the nights grow chilly. The warm breath of the culm lures them on with promise of a warm bed for the night and they lie down to sleep in the comfortable atmosphere of the bank and never open their eyes again.

The noxious gases emanating from the bank waft over them so softly that they are soon asleep, and in many cases they never awaken, being suffocated during the night.

STEEL TRUST TO HAVE NEW HEAD

New York, Nov. 7.—The rumor that H. J. Frick will be the next president of the United States Steel Corporation has taken more tangible shape in Wall street.

The officials at the headquarters of the steel trust in this city refused to discuss the matter and at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. no denial of the rumor could be obtained.

A prominent Wall street broker said that he had known for some time that the officials of the steel trust believed it desirable to eliminate the Schwab interests from the executive control of the affairs of the trust, the more especially in view of the apprehension in the public mind caused by recent developments in the ship-building mud-dle.

KIDNAPER MAKES FULL CONFESSION

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 7.—Thomas Costello, alias Tom Murphy, a companion of Pat Crowe, was captured here by the police after a hard fight. Costello confessed to Chief of Police Francis to participating in the kidnapping of young Cudaby at Omaha and to other crimes.

WARNING TO SPOONERS

Carroll college trustees have announced that any pupil caught kissing a girl on the school steps will be expelled, says a Milwaukee dispatch. The evil at Carroll is said to be even greater than at Janesville, where the kissing matches were so noisy and so prolonged that they kept people awake until the small hours of the morning.

At Carroll the "spoonies" are not satisfied with kissing each other after dark, but insist on stolen osculations in the dark corners of the halls by day as well.

"The loving game is too strong," was the way the college janitor expressed it, "and has got to stop."

The janitor's complaint to the faculty was supported, and he was ordered to report every case where a smack was heard. The trouble at Janesville was due to the complaints of people living near the school that they were unable to sleep because of it. Hereafter the police will arrest for disorderly conduct all kissing students.

BURGLAR PROOF PAY CARS.

Burglar proof pay cars are an innovation in railway equipment to be introduced by the Pennsylvania system, says a Pittsburgh dispatch. The company is now building at the Columbus shops a new style car for the use of the paymaster, to be as nearly burglar proof as it is possible to make it, and if the car proves successful it will be used as the standard style on the system.

A small fraction of an ounce of radium, properly employed, would provide a good light sufficient for several rooms and would not require renewal during the present century.

MINERS

BURIED IN A BURNING SHAFT IN MONTANA.

Nine Bodies Taken From the Workings—75 May Have Perished by Flames or Smoke

Virginia City, Mont., Nov. 7.—Cut off from all possible chance of escape, nine miners were buried to death in a fierce fire which attacked the Kearns large gold mine located eight miles from the city, Friday. How much greater the death list will grow is difficult to say.

Seventy-five men were in the workings when fire burst forth from the shaft. Nine bodies have by heroic efforts been recovered, but how many more unfortunates lie buried there none will venture to say.

The known dead are Superintendent R. B. Turner, a miner named Tobin and five other miners too badly burned to be identified. These seven bodies have been recovered.

It is the property of United States Senator Millard of Nebraska and was valued at about $1,000,000. There is no way to estimate the loss at present.

The fire which started at 7 o'clock as the shifts were being changed, still rages, fiercely, and the rescuers will be hampered, as there is no apparatus at the mine. It is not known how the fire started.

Superintendent Turner gave his life for his men. He was at breakfast and partially dressed when the alarm came. Dashing into the house in his shirt sleeves with another miner, whose name has not been learned, Turner made his way into the main tunnel.

Here they found everything ablaze. They groped their way down and dragged out five bodies, including Tobin's. In a second attempt they did not come out, and were later brought forth dead by the rescuers, the man who so heroically aided Turner perishing with him.

The shaft house, cyaniding plant and tunnel are a total loss. It is not known how badly the workings of the mine have been damaged.

EASTERN OHIO HAS FEUD COUNTY

Stenbenville, O., Nov. 7.—Growing out of startling testimony, given by witnesses in the recent murder trial of Samuel Ashby, which reflected on various persons in Warren township, numerous feuds have sprung up.

George Livingstone attacked John Simpkins and was shot at.

The Stringer property was burned along with that of others, entailing a loss of $30,000, and another attempt to burn property was frustrated.

Every man in the township goes armed and many do not go out at night, fearing assassination.

TRANSPORTED GRAIN ELEVATOR ON SCOWS.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 7.—A remarkable feat of engineering was accomplished by men who contracted to move a grain elevator 700 feet high a distance of six blocks, and then across the Menominee river.

The contractors had the worst job in getting the big structure on the scow. It took 32 days to do this. Once aboard the transport, a tug slowly pulled the big cargo down the river. Thousands of spectators lined the banks to see the unusual sight.

LIVED TO BE 102: NEVER ILL.

Menominee, Wis., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Anna Kirschbaum is dead here at the age of 102. She had never been ill but half a day in her life. This remarkable woman never took a dose of medicine and always gave the advice that "more sleep and less medicine" was the remedy for 90 per cent of so-called illness. While she was not an advocate of Christian Science, she was a strong enemy to all doctors.

BRUSSELS UNIONS PUT UP BUILDING FOR THEMSELVES

CONTAINS OFFICES, ROOMS FOR UNIONS, NIGHT SCHOOLS FOR THE WORKERS AND THEIR CHILDREN—PHYSICIAN EMPLOYED TO GIVE FREE MEDICAL ADVICE—CO-OPERATION AND UNIONISM IN BELGIUM.

Special Correspondence to the Newspaper Enterprise Association by Max S. Hayes.

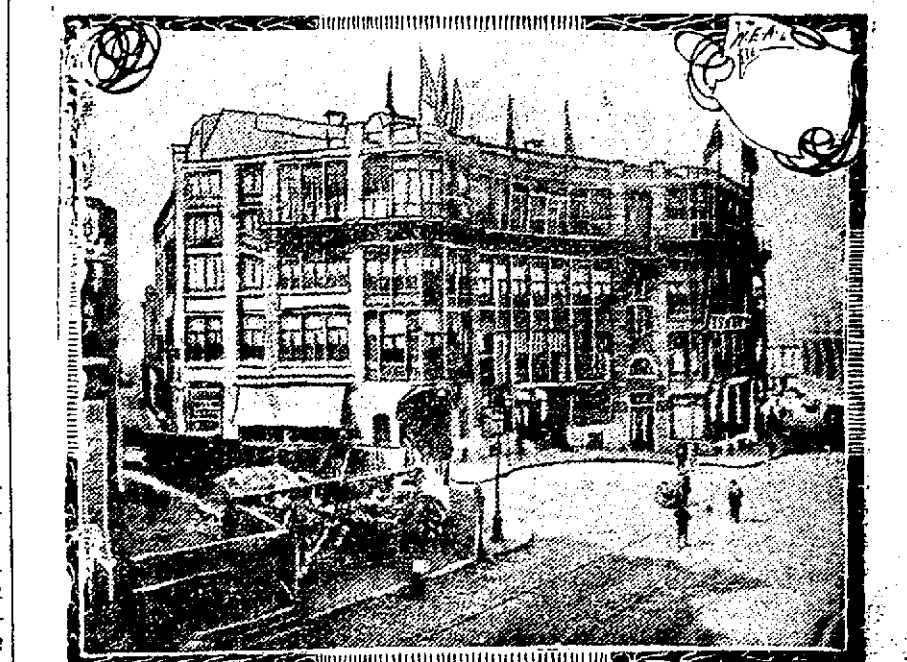

Brussels, Nov. 7.—Like the labor movement of France, the working classes of Belgium are well organized and stand together industrially, economically, socially and politically. They have strong unions, widespread co-operative enterprises, a powerful Socialist party, and their friendly societies, so-called, which correspond to the American mutual aid associations and secret societies, are utilized in the uplifting process through which they are passing.

The unions have played an important part in bettering the conditions of labor during the past three years. From the data that I have been able to procure it appears that during the period

("the people's house") in 1896. It is five stories high, and, situated on a hill on Rue Josef Stevens, commands an excellent view of the entire city.

The building, which is now the home of the unions, the co-operative societies and Socialist party, cost $300,000 and contains two large halls, a theatre that seats 2,800 people, 22 small halls in which meetings are held by 80 local organizations, besides a large number of offices for union headquarters. In this building is also located the International Socialist bureau, which receives from and transmits news to the Socialist parties in all countries of Europe, as well as America, Australia, Japan and South Africa.

The unions of Brussels, through the Maison du Peuple, are educating their claimed the best organized trades have succeeded in raising wages fully 50 per cent, while the hours of labor have also been reduced considerably.

There are about 60 national and district unions in Belgium, with close to 200,000 members. Many of them are federated with unions of their trades in France, Germany, England and other countries; among them may be mentioned the miners, hatters, printers and several branches of clothing workers. There is not a single non-union printer in Brussels, and the linotype operators work seven hours per day, while the hand compositors are required to "set" no more than 25 lines per hour. If a "swift" puts together 50 lines per hour on the average he works half a day and receives pay for a full day.

Two years ago the hatters were locked out, and after spending $5,000 they compelled the bosses to surrender. Now 77 per cent of the trade is organized and the workers have complete control. Nearly all the iron workers are also in the union, and the building trades are also quite strong.

In Brussels 64 unions with a membership of 30,000 erected a splendid structure called the Maison du Peuple.

ROMANCE OF THE 18-KARAT KIND MADE PRETTY NURSE WEALTHY MAN'S BRIDE

Augusta, Me., Nov. 7.—Famously romantic was the love that was crowned by the marriage of C. Stillman and Miss Mary E. Wright of this city, a pretty trained nurse, whose father became a sister-in-law of two daughters of William Rockefeller and Mrs. "Fifi" Potter Stillman, daughter of James F. Stillman. Their attachment in the Boston Hospital she became doubtless a topic of conversation at breakfast in New York. Love, pure and unadorned, was the result of the romance.

When a young man, Stillman lay ill of typhoid fever in the magnificent hospital of the city, and which was built largely through the efforts of the Rockefeller family, who wanted to attend him. His life hung in the balance, and he would never recover, he did not die. The pretty nurse saved him, and when he was of living came back to him he took a long time to get well. All is fully recovered, a reward for months a warm love for the woman who saved him. This culminated naturally in the marriage here recently. Stillman's parents sanctioned the match.

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and pure medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or official names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected, because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

THE CHILDREN'S FIRE

It was the finest kind of an evening, so quiet everywhere. There was not a sound except over in the clover field, where the children were playing hide and seek.

Hattie and Jamie and Jack loved to play there. The clover smelled so sweet, and it grew so tall you could drop down anywhere.

"One, two, three, seven, fifteen, twenty-five, a hundred!" Jamie counted, because he was "it." "All ready? I'm comin'!"

Then he hunted all over the field till he found Hattie and Jack buried head, neck and heels in clover, and the three ran to the goal.

"Hattie's it. I touched first," said Jamie.

"No, sir; I touched the post before Jack."

So Jack leaned his head against the post and counted and caught Hattie the next time.

Then Hattie took her turn, and everything would have been just beautiful if she had not uncovered one blue eye to look out. It was not fair. Some think she peeped to see where Jack and Jamie were going to hide. But she saw instead a great round blaze of fire coming right out of the roof of their papa's big barn.

"O-o-ooh, our barn!" screamed Hattie.

But she did not say it all out before Jack and Jamie saw it too.

"It's on fire!" they cried.

Then, oh, how they ran, through clover, over fence and ditch, across the road and up the path! They could hardly breathe when they reached the house.

And would you believe it? There sat papa on the porch as cool as a cucumber as if his grain were not burning up or anything.

"Oh, papa!" cried Hattie and Jamie and Jack all together.

"Yes; I see. It's the finest moon we've had this season," said papa.

"Oh," said the children, and then their faces grew as red as red could be, perhaps because they were so warm with running.—Hester K. Close in Youth's Companion.

Speckie.

A funny thing happened not long ago on a farm. It might have turned out tragically had not the owner come by in time. There was an old hen named Speckie, who was such a patient sitter that nearly all the eggs put under her came out well. So the farmer had for some time past put valuable duck eggs in her nest, and old Speckie grew accustomed to having her brood of young hopefuls make for the pond the first thing after they were hatched. She used to stand on the bank and watch her youngsters sporting in the water with much the same manner as a human mother would assume if her children did an unusual and brilliant feat.

But one day the farmer, without any real thought as to past habit, put a lot of valuable hen eggs under Speckie, and in due time out came a brood of duff balls that did the mother's heart good. At the proper time she marched them down to the pond and stood amazed as the balls refused to take the plunge. She cackled angrily, evidently scolding them for their stupid and sullen behavior. Seeing that her words had no influence over this strange family, she started to drive them all into the water with a broom. Just then the farmer came along and saved the lives of those poor innocent chicks. He laughed heartily at Speckie's forgetfulness of her own nature and instincts, but he decided to keep Speckie on ducks in the future, since she was such a creature of habit.

Only Fifty Cents.

There was once a little country cousin who went to visit a city cousin, and he learned much of life, as you shall see. Before the boy started for the city his father gave him 50 cents with which to have some fun. When he arrived in the city he told his cousin of the money and asked his advice as to the best way of spending the half dollar. The city cousin began to think and at last suggested the circus, but as there was only the half dollar between them they had a difficulty to set aside.

"The seats are 50 cents," said the city cousin, "and so we can only buy one."

"Let us toss for it," said the country cousin, with the air of the millionaire who cares little for results where modest fortunes are concerned.

So they tossed up, and the city cousin got it.

Imagine if you can the feeling of the country boy when he saw his companion and the hope for fun disappearing in the circus tent.

The Choristers.

There's a little band of singers Every evening comes and sings 'Neath the windows of my cottage in the trees.

And with dark they raise their voices, And the gathering night rejoices, And the leaves join in the chorus with the breeze.

Then the twinkling stars come out To join the merry rout, And the squirrels range themselves upon a log.

And the fireflies furnish light— That they read their notes aright— The katydid, the cricket and the frog.

All the night I hear them singing, Through my head their tunes are ringing— Strains of music straight from Mother Nature's heart:

Now the katydid and cricket, From the dewy spider-thicket; Then the croaking frog or voodoo drowns his part.

By and by the moon appears As the midnight hour nears And smiles dispel the lowering mist and fog;

Then the minstrel is at his height, And they sing the night— The katydid, the cricket and the frog.

MINCE PIE.

I LOVE to sit and think awhile— And smile! I love to sit and think awhile, While the waiter up the aisle Between the rows of tables ne'er Brings me the jumbled gob of sweet Mince pie!

I love to grab the sprinkler in My din— I love to grab the sprinkler in My slinking hand and then begin To gently lift the pie's hot edge And pulverize in rapture wedge In my Mince pie!

And then I love to take my ease And freeze to it and rub my knees With 't'her hand in sweet content— All raptures of the joy gods blent In me! Oh, gee!

I love to taste the toothsome dish And wish That I might taste the toothsome dish Till elephants all turn to fish And maidens never long to wed! No other bliss may serve instead Or my Mince pie!

And then, when everything is done, And none— And then, when everything is done, And none is left where I'd begun, I love to feel my proud soul soar As early I order more.

Mince pie— Oh, die!

CHOOSING COMRADES

Little Bill doesn't like it sometimes because Dad won't let him play with Tom, Dick and Harry on the streets, and he thinks it very unkind in Dad to lecture him on the choice of companions.

But listen, Bill, to this harrowing tale of the Lion and the Hippo.

A Lion and a Hippo met very accidentally one day, and as each was attracted by the other they decided to set out on a journey together. They knew nothing of each other's habits or manner of life. But each was attracted to the other by what they saw and heard.

"My, but you have a fine roar," said Hippo. "It must be a grand thing to travel with a fellow like you, who could scare almost anything with that voice."

"And you," said the Lion, "I like you. You have so much face. Why, you have cheek enough to make your way anywhere."

And so without more ado they shook hands and started.

They traveled a long journey the first day and were exceedingly hungry when night came. They found themselves in the midst of a great desert, where there was nothing but rocks and sand. The Hippo sighed. "My, but I wish I had some nice hay or grass!"

"Wouldn't mind a good fat calf myself," said the Lion sadly.

"I thought you ate grass," said the Hippo.

"I thought you ate meat," said the Lion.

"Let's go to sleep and forget it," said Hippo.

"Let's," assented the Lion.

But when Mr. Lion had fallen soundly asleep Mr. Hippo reached over and began to munch his long whiskers.

Mr. Lion awoke with a yell.

"I beg your pardon," meekly said Hippo. "I thought you were hay."

Sleep soon conquered Hippo. But Mr. Lion was very hungry. He got up and seized Hippo by the throat and began to kill him.

The poor Hippo shrieked for help.

"Excuse me," said the Lion savagely. "I thought you were a beefsteak." And he ate him up.

Small Merchants.

A striking example of what energetic and hustling boys can do in a business is illustrated by Charles and Russell Ansbach of this place, who own a flourishing grocery business on Whittely street, says a Fremont (O.) correspondent of the Columbus Press.

The boys, twelve and nine years of age, started with a capital of 27 cents, their first venture being the selling of candy and oranges from a small stand placed in a yard. They were patronized by their neighbors and friends, and within a month of the opening, March 19 of this year, they were able to build a small shed, where they kept a stock of groceries.

They began a system of bookkeeping, bought and delivered their own groceries, and by clever advertising soon attracted the attention of the public. Their fresh goods, courteous manner and energetic methods combined to bring plenty of customers, and prospering, they were able to erect a little store, which is stocked with a line of groceries complete in all details.

The boys own a little red delivery wagon and can be seen early and late catering to their customers. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Ansbach, and their ambition is to be the proprietors of the largest grocery store in Sandusky county.

A Catapult.

To make a catapult from an old pen first break off the points and then stick it into a piece of wood. Use one of the points for a spring, as shown in the illustrations, and you will have a catapult that will throw peas or small wads of paper.

How They Bought a Baby.

A returned missionary tells the story of a tiny baby girl who was brought to her dispensary in Szechow. Two young Chinamen were carrying it, and in a very awkward and embarrassed manner they told her the story. They had found it in a straw shanty, its mother dying, and had left $10 with her and brought the baby where it would have proper care. Though they were taking the baby only for its own good, their ideas of honesty would not permit them to do so without leaving a sum of money with the one they considered the "rightful owner."

This Grownup Likes Toys.

The prefect of police in Paris is a most enthusiastic supporter of the annual exhibition of toys and has given several important prizes for ingenious inventions. He takes great interest in all the amusements of the city's boys and girls and during the exhibition is very fond of walking about, winding up and explaining the mechanical toys and helping interested visitors to "work out" the puzzles.

BOND SALE.

LEGAL NOTICE.

Sealed proposals will be received at the office of the Clerk of Council of the City of Newark, State of Ohio, until 12 o'clock noon, Monday, the 23rd day of November, 1903, or the purchase of the following described bonds of said City of Newark, State of Ohio:

1. ## PRAYER to THE JANITOR

THOU who, as Winsome Winnie says, Dost "turn the building on and off,"

Give ear, I pray thee, to my prayer, That's interrupted by a cough. There's goodness on my personage. There's cleanliness on my aching feet; O janitor, please, janitor, Give us a tiny bit of heat!

We've lost the loaman's friendship, for We have no use for him or his. The ice he furnishes ain't half As cold as all my family is. My wife and little ones weep half That sounds like buckshot on the floor; Please give us heat or, janitor, We never will be warm some more!

Last night I lay awake and wept To think that when the morning came I'd have to get me up and dressed And start once more the freezing game. Each child is shaking like a leaf. O poppin' in a summer storm, And now and then I see them crawl Into the ice chest to get warm.

O janitor, hear now the curse! That shall be thine if thou dost not Give ear unto our freezing plaint And make this flat all nice and hot; May you through all eternity Sit on an iceberg stark and bare. The while a million yam leaf fans Keep stirring up the icy air! —Baltimore American.

A Forced Laugh.

Willie—I ain't laffin 'cause you got it. I'm laffin 'cause I ain't got it.—New York Times.

Woman's Progress.

"Do you think woman has really progressed so much?"

"Certainly."

"She does not seem to be prized as much as she was formerly."

"How do you make that out?"

"Well, the man in search of a wife used to consider her worth stealing once. Then he gave up his stealing habits, except for an occasional lapse, but he still considered her worth buying, and his success corresponded with his financial rating. Now—"

"Well, what now?"

"Why, he demands a cash bonus now, so that in effect she has to buy him."—Chicago Post.

What to do Until the Doctor Arrives.

"One of my children was taken with cramp colic and suffered severely," says S. B. Elze, of Monett, Mo. "I telephoned for a doctor, then gave a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and a few minutes later a second dose. Before the doctor came the child was relieved." ## The Football Gist.

Eyes that are clear as the sparkling air When the first spirited forerunner flares; Cheeks all aglow with the daintiest red, Wind tossed hair round a graceful head, Bonny and blithe some beyond compare— Hail to the queen of the game!

There are courage and hope in her eyes so brown, And she raises the blue flag high, And, winning or losing, till all is done She is true to her colors and cheers them on.

With the Yale blue violets in her gown, Fair symbol of loyalty.

There is much that is dear in the victor's prize— Honor, applause and fame— But when the strife ends in a victory The first and the best which the winners see

Is a swift flashing signal from beauty's eyes, A smile from the queen of the game.

Then here's to the maid who begins her reign When the dead leaves race and whirl! Heartily and loud is the praise I bring, For fairer of all is the maid I sing. So fill up your glasses and pledge again A toast to the football girl! —Raymond W. Walker in Kansas City Star.

UNIQUE FOOTBALL TRICK.

Indian Player Hid Ball Under Sweater and Scored a Touchdown.

In a game full of the wildest excitement and witnessed by 12,000 people Harvard barely defeated the Carlisle Indians on Soldiers' field at Cambridge the other afternoon by a score of 12 to 11, says the New York World. At the end of the first half the visitors led with a score of 5 points and at the beginning of the second half scored a touchdown on the most unique trick play that has ever been seen in Cambridge. Thus, with a score of 11 points against her and the second half partially over, the crimson started to win out. Harvard scored her two touchdowns and Marshall kicked the goals, which gave the winning point.

Carlisle got the ball in the first half on forcing Harvard to punt and from the forty yard line carried it down to within ten yards of the crimson goal. Here Harvard braced, and little Johnson, instead of punting, had the ball passed back and held for a place kick. The little Indian leader kicked a beautiful goal. "There was no more scoring in this half, but on the very first kick off in the second half the Indians got the ball and, gathering in a mass, concealed the pigskin for a second, while it was tucked up under the back of Dillon's sweater. Harvard did not fathom the trick, and Dillon, with a clear field and the ball securely tucked up under his sweater, started down the gridiron and over the line, where he reached around and pulled the pigskin out and touched it to the ground. Johnson kicked a goal.

The run by Dillon was decidedly the feature of the game and will undoubtedly give rise to a vast deal of discussion. The instant he caught the ball the entire Carlisle team clustered about him so that no one could see what was being done. The Harvard team threw themselves on the massed Indians just as the latter had begun to move down the field well bunched. While the crimson players were searching for the ball Dillon came out of the crowd entirely empty handed and had gone thirty or forty yards before a single person in the crowd realized that he had the ball. As he neared the Harvard goal the football was seen bulging beneath his sweater behind his back. The Harvard undergraduates fairly gasped, while the rest of the spectators shrieked with laughter. Coach Cranston made a protest, but the play was allowed. There is no rule covering the play.

PROPER CAPER IN VIOLETS.

Latest Fad Is to Tie the Bunches With Black Velvet Ribbon.

"No more cords and no more tassels," declared an up to date florist to a reporter of the Philadelphia Record—"that is, as far as the modish bunch of violets is concerned. I've just had a letter from a friend of mine in Paris, and he says that the latest fad is to tie up your bunch of violets with black velvet ribbon. I've already laid in a stock of black velvet ribbon three-fourths of an inch in width—that is the correct width. The quality must, of course, be above reproach. To start out with, there must be a superb bunch of violets, both as to quality and quantity. Either the richly purple singles or the bluer doubles may be the choice—that is merely a matter of taste, becomingness and harmony with the rest of the wearer's attire.

"The test comes with the ribbon. I've only tied a few as yet, and I average about five yards of ribbon each. In shape the bow is an abbreviated shower, and in one that I measured off I allowed four six inch loops (that's twelve inches to the loop), three eight inch loops, two that measured ten inches, one twelve and two ends of about twelve inches each. The effect was very rich and smart."

He's a Hammer.

The style of whistle nowadays in the lips of the average youngster in business is aggravatingly insolent. It is a sort of rattling-jagtime threepost. I can get along better with the man who hums softly to himself, says a correspondent of the New York Press. You all know him. Ten to one he is a mild old gentleman who does not know how to spell "F-u-n." He is father of a dozen children and works as a clerk at $10 a week. His amiable wife frowns him into silence at home, so he hums as he ambles along the street. I walked behind such a man recently from the post office to Trinity church in New York, and he repeated a score of times that dear old song:

One more day's work for Jesus,
One more day's work for Jesus,
One more day's work for Jesus,
One more day's work for—HOME!

I wanted to join in the chorus, but out of respect to that timid, simple, guileless soul desisted.

The Thankful Freshman.

Thanksgiving day had never had for me, a college lad, A meaning worth a moment's thought. My father was a millionaire; I never knew a day of care; 'Twas hardly strange my thanks were rare.

For what fate, ever kind, had brought, My golden hair (some call it red) Was hanging down my back and led Me to select a mission high. I yearned to win undying fame In some Thanksgiving football game. At last the fateful moment came: My hair was there, and so was I.

By bruises on the other side My form was very promptly "piled." They walked and walked upon my neck. They slammed me till they shed my blood. They clammed me down with sickening thud.

They jammed me deep in seas of mud Until I seemed and was a wreck! With tireless zeal throughout the game They jumped and bumped upon my frame; They sought my legs and arms to rive; And when the doctors set me free Thanksgiving day had come to be A day of fervent thanks to me.

I thanked my stars I was alive! —Harper's Magazine.

THROUGH BERING SEA AND THE NORTH PACIFIC

Special Advocate Correspondence by Will H. Brill, Newspaper Enterprise Association's Special Commissioner with U. S. Senate Committee in Alaska.

Sitka, Alaska. "Well, here we are again," as the clown says in the circus. Sitka seems very much like home. It is my last letter from this place, and in the meantime we have traveled nearly 6000 miles through the Yukon territory and Alaska. We are still nearly 1100 miles from Seattle and "the States," but that isn't far.

We have been three weeks on the trip from Nome to this place, and it has been a very pleasant trip. Here's peninsula gradually die away in the sea, making in their last struggle for existence a chain of islands that extend more than 300 miles off the end of the peninsula. The last of these islands, Attu, is more than 3500 miles west of San Francisco. The few dozen baskets left on Attu weave the finest in the world and they know it. Even at Dutch Harbor where the baskets are marketed it is impossible to get a good one for less than $20 to $30, and in the states the price is more than doubled.

Dutch Harbor is one of the finest landlocked harbors in the world. For a century and a half it has sheltered the ships of a score of nations from the storms of Bering sea and the Pacific, and it would today easily shelter all the navies of the world. The Pacific naval squadron was there during our visit, the New York, the Philadelphia, the Bennington the Concord and a tug. There was also a British gunboat, the Shearwater and three revenue cutters, the McCulloch, the Bear and the Rush. Admiral Glass was in command of the naval squadron.

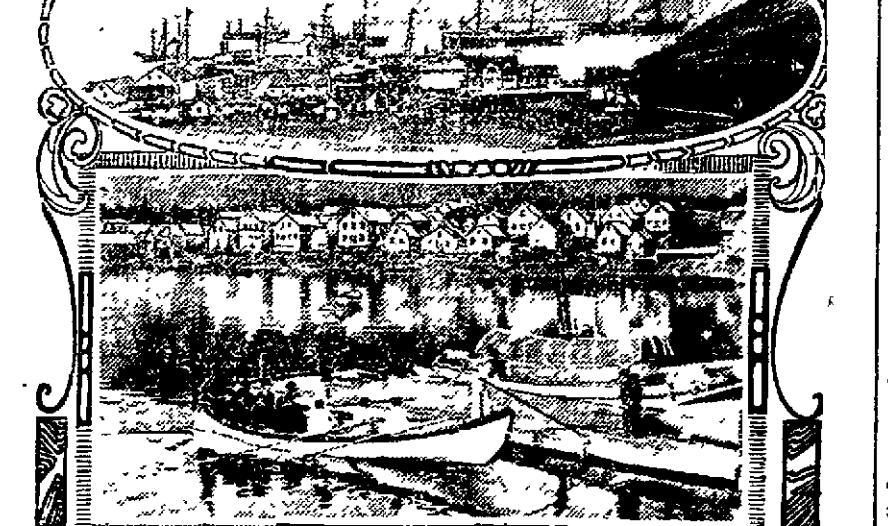

Now, an Admiral is entitled to a salute of 13 guns, and a senatorial committee to a salute of 17 guns. The a word of advice to you. If you ever get a chance to travel on a revenue cutter, don't refuse. There may be pleasanter ways to travel, but it would be pretty hard to find them. And of all the revenue cutters there are, choose the McCulloch. All revenue cutter officers are gentlemen and good sailors, but the McCulloch's officers seem to be particularly designed to play the part of hosts. If you are a United States senator you will have to travel in state in the cabin with the captain, but if you are nothing but a humble newspaper man you can go in ward room with the junior officers, and that is where the fun is.

Let's not talk of the first stage of the homeward trip. It is enough to say that it was on the Bering sea and that the Bering sea was rough. To at committees visited all the naval vessels and the admiral visited all the cutters. The result was as like a bombardment as one could well imagine.

SENATORIAL PARTY LANDING AT SITKA. DUTCH HARBOR. KODIAK.

least one member of the party the States it was for a time a military post. In later years it was the largest fur shipping point in Alaska, but now it has only memories to keep it alive.

From Kodiak we cruised around the end of Afognak island and into Prince William sound, following this marvelous bay up to the new and thriving little city of Valdez. This town, built on the moraine of the foot of a great dead glacier, is one of the liveliest and most promising towns in Alaska. It will doubtless be the terminal of a government wagon road which will begin at Barrow, on the banks of the Yukon, and running down the Alaskan try as nothing else could do, and at the same time make Valdez a very important point. The discovery of a rich mining district a few miles into the hills back of Valdez gives promise of making the town doubly important. The Nezima mining district as it is called, has not yet been fully explored, but it gives promise of being very rich.

From Valdez we skirted the southern coast, past Mount St. Elias, which raises its snow-covered crest from among the smaller mountains at its base to a height of more than 18,000 feet from the sea level, past the great Mallsipina glacier, past Yakutat bay and village, until finally the extinct crater of Mt. Edgecombe appeared on the horizon, and a few hours later the chain sang through the hawse pipe as the anchor found a resting place in the harbor at Sitka.

The glaciers are one of the sights of Alaska. Nowhere in the world are there so many or such beautiful ice rivers. And if you want to see them you better hurry up, for there is not much time left. Your children's children will see but little of them, for they are fast passing away. In Glacier bay, where a score of great glaciers send their ice into the sea, an earthquake a few years ago broke off the front of the famous Muir glacier, and it is now impossible to get within seven or eight miles of it, because of the danger from floating ice. There are hundreds of glaciers in Alaska, but only a few of them are alive. "Live" glaciers are those which extend to the sea and break off into the water. The dead glaciers are those which are gradually receding, and while they move down a little every year, they melt back twice as far, and within a few years, or at least a few centuries, they will disappear entirely.

It is impossible to describe a glacier, it is even impossible to give any adequate idea of them by photographs. If you want to know of their beauties you will have to go and see them.

And now, we are back at Sitka. The remainder of the trip will be made in easy stages down through the inner passage, where we have seen everything, and it will not be necessary to look at any more scenery. That is the great trouble with Alaska, there is so much scenery that one gets tired of it. Scenery is a good thing, but if you don't think you can get too much of it, make a three-month tour through Alaska.

WILL H. BRILL.

ANSWER IT HONESTLY

Are the Statements of Newark Citizens More Reliable than Those of Utter Strangers?

This is the vital question. It is fraught with interest to Newark.

It cannot be evaded or ignored. A Newark citizen speaks here. A citizen's statement is reliable.

An utter stranger's doubtful. Home proof is the best proof.

Suitably Impressed.

"Yes, ma'am," said the young woman who sometimes gave readings, "I shall be glad to entertain your guests on the date you suggest. My terms for an evening are $25."

"My dear young lady," said Mrs. Spudlog, with a haughty smile, "there is never any question of compensation when anybody appears at my house in the character of an entertainer. It establishes one's standing, and the honor of so appearing is a sufficient remuneration."

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Spudlog, for not thinking of that," rejoined the other. "It is a privilege, indeed, to be asked to read at your home, where only the best people ever come. I can readily see how it gives one entire satisfaction and that this is worth more than mere money. I am therefore deeply sensible of the honor you confer in asking a comparatively unknown but ambitious person like me to appear in your parlors as a public entertainer, but my price, Mrs. Spudlog, is $25, just the same, in advance. Lovely weather we're having this week, isn't it?"—Chicago Tribune.

TWO LIARS

(Original.) "Remain here, captain," said the general, "until B's corps arrives. As soon as you see the head of the column turning the bend in the road below bring me word as fast as your horse will carry you."

We had drawn rein at the gateway of a large plantation, two pillars of stone, each surmounted by a lion, from which a long line of hedge extended in either direction almost as far as the eye could see. Within, a winding road lined with tropical plants and rows of high shade trees extended to the house. I rode into the place and up to a broad veranda. A white headed old negro came out of the front door and eyed me critically.

"I would like a lodging in this house for a time," I said to him. "For how long I don't know; not less than a few days and not more than a few weeks."

The old man led me into a spacious room on the ground floor and said: "Would you like a julep, sah?"

When he returned with it, I questioned him, and he told me that on our approach the family had departed and there was not a human being about the place except himself and me, for they had taken with them the few negroes who had remained loyal to them. Every day the man set before me the meager food the ample space for provisions contained and every night attended me to a chamber on the floor above, where I passed the night in a bed whose four high posts seemed to stand like sentinels to watch over my slumbers.

One night, not being able to sleep, I went into the corridor and, sitting on a window seat inclosed by curtains, spent an hour looking out on the moonlit grounds. I fell asleep. Waking suddenly, I heard a light footstep and the rustle of a dress on the staircase. What prompted me, whether an instinct for safety or of modesty, I know not, but I drew the curtains and peeped. The moonlight revealed the figure of a young girl descending from the floor above. Her face was oval, her hair raven, her eyes a lustrous black, in which even in the uncertain light I could detect anxiety, while the lines of her bust and limbs were exquisite curves. The figure as it passed my door paused and listened, then passed on softly to the floor below. I remained where I was for a few minutes and it returned, moving with the same caution, to the upper floor.

"Ethan," I said to the old negro the next morning, "are you sure there is no one in the house but yourself and me?"

"Sure nuff, sah. What mak yo' ask?" He looked at me suspiciously. "Have you ever heard that the house is haunted?"

"Now I come to think of it, sah, I have heard o' hants walkin' 'bout in de night. Have yo' seen any on 'em, sah?" "I think I saw one last night. Have you ever heard of a lovely young girl haunting the house?"

"Pears to me, sah, I have heard 'bout dat."

"I saw her last night. I was tempted to see if she was a ghost by sending a bullet through her."

The old man looked troubled. "Dat ghost didn't never hurt nobody," he said. "Haint no 'casion to shoot nor notten."

"I won't, Ethan, if I see her again. I'm not afraid of ghosts. Give me another cup of that substitute for coffee."

"Taint berry fine, sah. De block-aders don't let us hab any real coffee in dese days. Don't shoot none o' de hants, sah. Dey won't hurt yo'."

"That night I did not go to bed till past midnight. There was another walking of the ghost. This time she ran down the stairs, a terrible anxiety on every feature. I made up my mind that some one upstairs was very ill and she was going down for some needed article. When she came back I opened the curtains and met her face to face.

"All's lost!" she moaned. "All's gained," I replied. "You people of the south have dreaded our coming so long that when we come you are in terror for your lives. Some one is ill. There is a regiment stationed at J., five miles from here. I can ride over and bring a surgeon."

She stood irresolute for a moment, then said: "Yes, it is better that he should be taken than that he should die. My brother, an officer of the Confederate army, is lying upstairs wounded, and we fear he is dying."

There was a satisfaction in the ride I took that moonlight night, bringing a surgeon back with me to treat an enemy. By the time I returned the family were not only reconciled to trust me, but eagerly awaiting the man I brought. When we entered the sick room, there stood a mother and sister by the bedside of the invalid. The surgeon could not have been more tender with the most beloved of his comrades than he was with the Confederate, remaining with him till morning and coming every day for a week, when he pronounced him out of danger.

"Ethan," I said one day after the secret was out, "are there any more ghosts in the house?"

"Fo' de Lawd, mars'r, I've berry much mot'ified 'bout dat what I told yo'. Missis and Missy Florence reckoned yo' Yankees'd kill Mars'r Howard 's soon as yo' sot eyes on him."

"Ethan," I replied, "you told me big lies about the hants."

When General B's troops arrived, I rode out to the general and told him that there was a case of yellow fever in the house and he had better be guarded about it till the men had passed in order to be sure no one became infected. Then I rode on to report his arrival to my general, muttering: "You're a bigger liar than the darkey."

HIS LACK OF PUBLIC SPIRIT

[Original.]

Sitting in the reading room of a hotel one cold winter evening I noticed an old, badly dressed man come in, look about him as if not knowing exactly what to do, warm his hands by the fire, then turn and go out. There was something in his appearance that interested me. He seemed like a man who had a history. Whether it was a benevolent expression that ill accorded with his ragged and air of prosperity that had been stamped upon him in other days and under other circumstances I could not tell. I followed him from the room in time to see him go out into the cold. I asked the landlady about him, and he told me the old man's story:

"Sandy O'Neill, when a young man, was the pet of the village, or, rather, the village was Sandy's pet. Some used to call him maudlin over other people's troubles, but those to whom he gave his sympathy were of no such mind and loved him as he deserved to be loved. Sandy's only trouble was that he had no means with which to make people happy. He never met a child that he didn't run through his pockets to find a cent for candy, and when he failed to find one would often lead his little protegee to a shop and provide the sweets on credit. But Sandy's great charm was a cheerfulness that communicated itself to others and was a relief to those in distress. 'Always darkest before day,' 'Every cloud has a silver lining,' 'It's a long road that has no turn'—these and many more such sayings he had for despondent friends and would deliver them with such cheer, winning smiles that none could help being comforted.

"Sandy had more in him than people suspected. He never could become prosperous by ordinary methods, for he would give money faster than he could possibly make it. His only chance was to make it all at once. This he did. A stranger came to town, took a fancy to him and induced him to go with him to the copper mines of Lake Superior. There Sandy became possessed of an embryo mine, which proved of great value, and he found himself a millionaire.

"One day ten years after Sandy had left the town one of our morning papers announced that 'Alexander O'Neill, the distinguished copper king, a former resident of this city, arrived yesterday on a visit to the place of his birth.' It was more than a visit, for Sandy had come to stay.

"In view of Sandy's past charitable disposition, it was generally admitted that he would do a great deal with his wealth for the town. A public reception was accorded him, got up by the first citizens. I noticed one man's name on the reception committee whom I had heard speak of Sandy O'Neill as 'maudlin' over other people's troubles.' The organizers of the testimonial were all interested in property and enterprises which they hoped would be benefited by the copper king. The greeting of those whom he had befriended was different. They welcomed him with smiles at his good fortune, with tears at remembering his past kindnesses.

"Sandy got through the reception as best he could and put it behind him as something with a bad odor. He went about just as he used to, sympathizing with his friends, only now when he left them there was something substantial in their hands to mark his visit. He did nothing for the town, only for the people. For one he put a new roof on his house, for another paid off a mortgage, for another bought a cow that the children might have plenty of milk. Wherever he found a sick person he visited the doctor and provided comforts. And everywhere that Sandy went he gave as much comfort with his kindly, gayer words as with his money.

"But when those who had no need for Sandy's small benefits found that he would do nothing for the town, when he had refused to take an interest in a park which was intended to bolster a real estate speculation, a railroad that was to connect the place with a neighboring city, a dam to furnish water power, they turned against him. When he had first returned, he was 'Alexander O'Neill, the distinguished copper king.' He had not been in town long before the first citizens spoke of him as 'Sandy O'Neill, the man with no public spirit whatever.'

"Well, for years Sandy pursued the occupation he had chosen of giving away his money. Then came a great commercial crisis, and the small balance that was left to him disappeared. Sandy was without a cent. By this time he had dropped from among the first citizens, and his loss made not a ripple in that part of the community. It was a long while before it was known among those he had befriended that he was in want, but when they heard it they swarmed about him, gists.

those who had savings offering to share them with him and those who had not saving through tears. 'God bless you, Mr. O'Neill, and give you back your fortune.'

"Then some of the first citizens who had been interested in getting up his reception, when the fact that he was penniless and had passed into old age became notorious, offered to get up a donation affair for him. I have always believed they did it to humiliate him. Sandy declined their offer, saying that he had many friends who would not see him suffer. And he had and has now. When he wants a meal, there are a thousand people ready to give it to him. He has a room in a house he built for a poor family, and those he befriended are constantly clamoring for him to eat with them."

Nevertheless, Sandy O'Neill is a wreck.

And each canard has vanished
In darkness after him;

When every loan is floated,
When every bond is sold,
And every scheme promoted,
Turns out as good as gold,
When stocks have reached a level
From which they cannot fall,
And prophecies of evil
Are turned toward the wall;

When every corner's busted
And bank reserves are high,

A CASE of MANIA

[Original.]

"Is that Dr. Hamilton at the phone?"
"Yes, I am Dr. Hamilton."
"Mrs. Ward wants you to come to her immediately. She is very ill."
"All right, I'll go at once."
"Confound it!" exclaimed the doctor as he hung up the receiver and returned to a party of bachelors he was entertaining at dinner. He had that very day declined an invitation from this Mrs. Ward, a wealthy young widow, to escort her to the opera, his excuse being that he had a patient in charge whom he could not leave. The real cause of his declining was that a college classmate had come to town and the doctor desired to give him a stag dinner at his house.

"You fellows keep the ball rolling," he said. "I've got a call and must leave you for a while. Patrick, keep the gentlemen well supplied with wine. There's a fresh box of cigars in the sideboard."

Dr. Hamilton was in too much of a hurry to get back to the party to wait for his own horse and fortunately found a passing cab. In ten minutes he was at Mrs. Ward's. He found her on a lounge in the library dressed in dinner costume, a lamp with a rose tinted shade standing on a table beside her, facing a very becoming light on her face. The doctor advanced and, taking her wrist between his fingers, looked at her searchingly.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.
"I don't know. After dinner I was seized with a very singular feeling."

"Where?"
"In the ears."

The doctor removed the shade from the lamp and, taking a little glass from his instrument satchel, threw concentrated rays of light into the widow's left ear. Finding nothing unusual there, he examined the other ear.

"It's quite possible," he said, "that a tiny bug crawled into your ear and crawled out again. You hear nothing unusual now?"

"No, I haven't heard anything unusual."

"Then what was the sensation?"
"A terrible longing."

"Longing for what?"
"Foring it is again!" And a tremor ran over his shapely frame.

The doctor, thinking that it might be a symptom of insanity, looked steadily into her eye. It was clear as a bell, soft and liquid, as it met his. There was not even the slightest indication of nerve tension. The doctor was puzzled.

"I'm afraid I'm going to lose my mind, doctor," said the patient.

"Why so?"
"I have paroxysms in which I feel that I must hear harmonious sounds or go wild. Oh, doctor, if you could only play on the piano!"

"I can't."

"Then won't you take me somewhere where I can hear music. It is the only thing that would satisfy my insane craving."

"H'm," said the doctor. A light was beginning to break in upon him. "You have seats at the opera?"

"A box. How unkind of you to decline to take me when I had gone to the trouble to provide places."

It was a reproachful look the widow gave him out of her soft eyes. The doctor, who up to this moment had but one desire—to get back to his convivial guests—began to feel other sensations. Mrs. Ward was a very pretty woman, a very charming woman. To one of her own sex her ruse would have excited contempt. Not so to the man. He thought it all very cute.

"Excuse me a moment," he said, rising. "I must use your telephone. The patient I have in charge is in a critical condition, and I must keep in touch with him."

"You'll find it in the little room at the end of the hall."

The doctor rang up his own house and called for one of his guests.

"I'll be longer than I supposed," he said, "but I'll be back before the evening is over."

"Serious case?"
"Very."

"All right; we'll stay till you come."

Then Dr. Hamilton returned to the widow and told her that he could spend an hour with her at the opera.

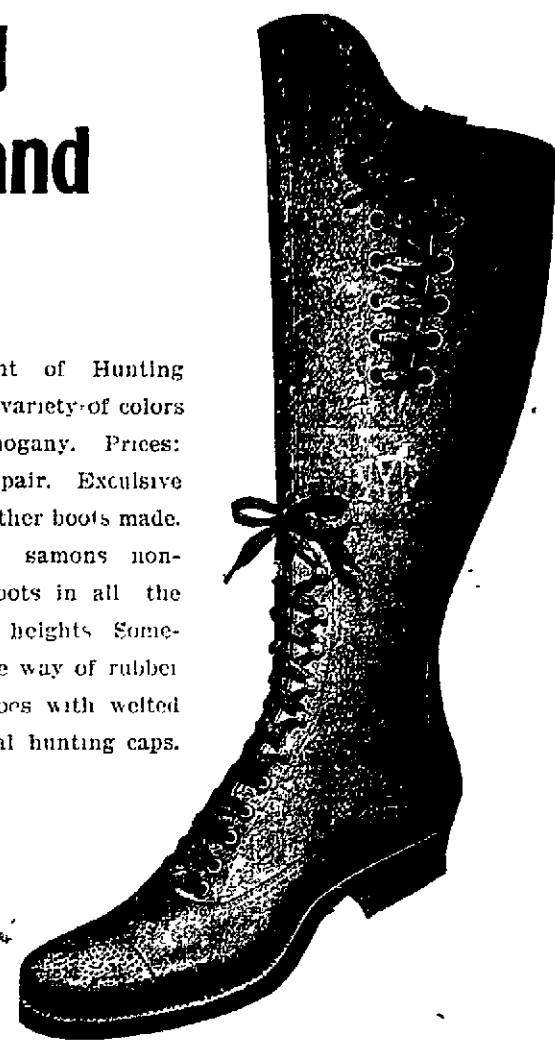

"Doctor," she said, "if I were to take you where your patient couldn't reach you and be sure to die while you were

"Perhaps if we stay here and the paroxysm comes on again if you whisper softly in my ear with that musical voice of yours it would allay the craving."

"We'll try it."

The doctor again examined the pulse, this time taking the little hand in his to determine whether it was moist or feverish. He sat in silence. He was thinking.

"Doctor," said the widow. "It's coming on again. Speak to me. Your voice is as harmonious as a cello."

"Mrs. Ward"—he began.

"Camilla—not Mrs. Ward. You would pronounce Camilla beautifully."

"Camilla."

"Go on."

"I love you."

That was the end of Mrs. Ward's paroxysms.

Dr. Hamilton returned to his guests at 11 o'clock.

The minister proposes to collect the sum of $50 before his entire congregation will collect $50, and if he loses he will buy a handsome communion service for use in the church. If he wins, the congregation is to buy him a new black suit, the cost not to exceed $25. The congregation is desirous of purchasing a church lot and is trying hard to raise the necessary money.

Can the Silk Hat Be Going?

Is the silk hat doomed? That is the question on quiet occasions. Is it being discarded both by professional and commercial men there can be no question, says the London Telegraph. For every tall hat asked for there are quite fifty or sixty felt hats and caps sold. In other directions the silk hat has also been very badly hit. It used to be a custom for all bank clerks to appear at business in the regulation silk hat. What happens now? Half the men wear caps or straw and the other half bowlers. This breaking of a time honored custom was due to a large extent to the example set by the members of the London Stock Exchange.

A MEDIAEVAL LOVE STORY

(Original.)

The Lady Agatha stood in the greenwood listening. She was the daughter of one with royal blood in his veins, and in such families it is well known that love plays no part in marriage. Yet love had come unbidden to the Lady Agatha, and she was playing with one of his sharp arrows. A young soldier came through the trees and joined her.

"Herbert!"
"Agatha!"
"I have bad news for you. My father announced to me today that I was to wed Count Alfred."

The young man quailed as if struck by a blighting word. "To lose you, and to him, my bitter enemy!" he moaned. "Herbert, be strong, for my sake!" And, throwing her arms about him, she wept on his shoulder.

"There is no hope."
"There is. Count Alfred will not force me to marry him if I tell him that such a marriage would be repulsive to me."

"He will follow his inclination. Agatha, choose now between me and him. If you choose me, meet me here tomorrow evening at sunset and be ready to go with me. I have found favor with the king, who, if we are once married, will give me preferment and his influence with your father."

She hesitated a moment, then whispered: "I am yours. I will meet you here."

That evening the earl, her father, summoned her to his apartments. There with him was the Count Alfred. "Agatha," said the earl, "this is your betrothed. I leave you with him, trusting that your first interview may result in your being mutually pleased with each other." With that he withdrew. Agatha threw herself at the count's feet.

"Your highness," she said, "I am going to trust myself to your mercy. I do not love you. I love another. Tell my father that you resign me."

The man started, but controlled himself. "What you ask is impossible. Our union will heal a breach between two important families. The king desires it."

"The man I would wed is in favor with the king. We will go to him for his consent."

"When?"
"Tomorrow evening. Give us but till then and all may be well with us."

"Give me your confidence, and I will help you."

Agatha gave the hour and place of meeting, but resolutely refused to give her lover's name. Then the count declared that he loved her too well to prevent her happiness.

"Noble man!" exclaimed Agatha, "your place in my heart shall always be next that of my lover."

The count withdrew muttering, "I have a delicate role to play."

The next morning Count Alfred told the earl of his interview and the Lady Agatha was locked in her room. At sunset Herbert repaired to the greenwood and waited impatiently. It was past the hour set and the twilight was deepening when a figure concealed in a long robe came toward him. He wondered how Agatha could look so tall. The figure came on and stopped before him. Then, suddenly, the robe was thrown off, revealing Count Alfred.

"I came," he said, "intending to conceal my identity, but since you are the man who intends to thrust yourself among those immeasurably above you I have stepped out of my disguise to give you the chastisement you merit."

"Nothing could be more welcome."

Both drew rapiers and placed themselves on guard. A full moon shone above the horizon, giving sufficient light, glistening on the polished blades, which gave the sound of steel against steel. It was a short fight. Count Alfred was so accustomed to contempt for his inferiors in birth that he was not as careful as his wont, but he was a good swordsman and fought well.

Herbert fought with a hope that the issue might give him the girl he loved. At last a ray of moonlight reflected from his adversary's sword shone in Count Alfred's eye, momentarily blinding him. Before he could recover Herbert's rapier had pierced his body. He would have fought on, but loss of blood weakened him, and he sank down in a faint.

Herbert, turning from him, saw his robe lying near and, putting it on, went toward the castle. Boldly entering, he asked where was the Lady Agatha. "In a chamber in the round tower," was the reply. Going there, he saw a woman sitting at the door and demanded entrance.

"Certainly, your highness," replied the woman, who had seen Count Alfred go off in the cloak she had herself provided, and she opened the door.

In a few minutes the man came out, dragging Agatha, who feigned to go unwillingly, and, making an exit, the two went to the greenwood, where Herbert had brought horses, and, mounting before the eyes of the wounded man, who had sought to prevent them, rode till near midnight, when they drew rein in the courtyard of the king's palace.

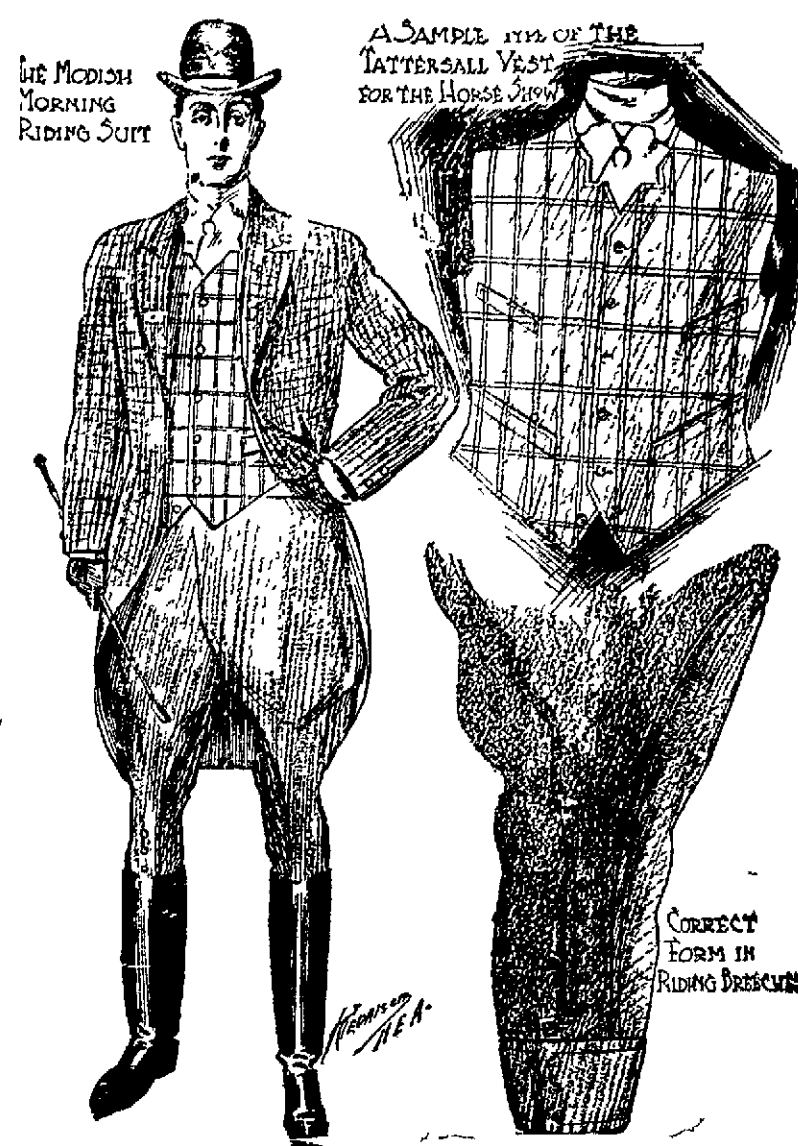

"What's this, boy?" said the king when Herbert had secured an audience. "An elopement, for which I crave your majesty's pardon and sanction." And Herbert told the story of how he had won.

"We need young men of your pluck," said the king. "I will see what I can do for you."

The result was that the earl's consent was gained to the marriage of Herbert and Agatha, and Herbert was given the command of a company and later of a regiment of arquebusers.

RACHEL ARMSTRONG.

Horse Show Clothes and General Hints.

New York, Nov. 7.—Automobling has had no effect upon equestrianism, and the oridle paths in the park are alive mornings, with men on horseback. All this sort of thing is quickened by the approach of the horse show, which is the annual equine and sartorial event. Riding clothes for the morning present a combination of style and comfort which vary, fundamentally, but little from season to season, but the general effect of color and cut is subject to the whims of fashion, like other garments.

Coats must take the wearers fully without in the slightest degree binding it—that is, they must be free and yet indicate the back and shoulder lines. The hat is always the derby for the ordinary morning center. The present smart outfit for informal horseback exercise is a black hat with curled brim and substantial guard, a stock, which is comfortable than a sharp collar made of soft white cheviot, secured at the fold with a gold pin in some noisy design. Large designs in these pins are favored. The waistcoat may be of a simple plaid flannel or the more striking tattersall. The topnotch style is single-breasted and has no collar.

There are patch flat pockets and the bottom is pointed. Tan leather gloves are preferred. A fancy Scotch suiting of light weight makes the coat, which should have the waist, seam and breast pocket. Set well back are the side pockets.

The breeches are full over the show proper respect for old age, but thighs, tight at the knees, reinforced just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off cured directly in front by buttons. The malades no matter how severe and irritable are patent leather, although leg-respective of old age. Dyspepsia, Jaundice, of pig-skin as well as puttees are dice, Fever, Constipation all yield to worn Ton coats are worn when cool, this perfect Pill 25c at Frank D. weather demands. They are of the Hall's Drug Store.

Robbin's egg blue striped with salmon and red, is a new combination in fancy shirt colors.

The paddock overcoat is a great favorite with tall youths men.

Red and green continue popular in neckwear shades. Buff colored garters or spots.

Black and white have broken out violently in the new waistcoats. The material is pique, with fine black stripes. The form is single breasted without a collar. Gray metal and light shades of gray continue popular.

Covert top coats are very short. Olive, tan and gray are popular. Black is not noticeable except in overcoats. Very little of it is seen in business suitings.

WHEN SHORTY'S CHANCE CAME

[Copyright, 1903, by C. D. Lewis.]

Around Fulton market and all along Front street they knew Shorty O'Higgins. His given name was John, but as he was a trifle less than five feet high he was always called Shorty.

There was only one thing to console Shorty in his struggles to keep a dun-garee suit of clothes on his back and prevent hunger from gnawing at his vitals. He couldn't sing, play the fiddle or dance a hornpipe, but he could sneeze. The fame of Shorty's sneeze extended clear down to the Battery and up to the Brooklyn bridge. It had been heard up Wall street as far as Exchange place. It was a sneeze peculiarly his own, and no one could tell him of it or produce a successful imitation. That sneeze didn't come under the head of "promptness and dispatch." It was all of ten minutes from the time his nose began to tickle until the explosion came. Explosion was the term for it. When the sneeze finally came it lifted Shorty's cap off his head, rent new holes in his shoes and started the cobblestones in the street from their sandy foundations.

One day Shorty picked up a bit of news and was at once interested. No one could remember when he had been interested in anything before. The Cubans had suddenly braced up and sailed into the Spaniards with new vigor, and the junta had raised a large sum of money in the States to send over a cargo of war material. Shorty learned what craft would take the cargo and her date of sailing, and it came about that he was included in the crew, though the mate bestowed a kick upon him as an "N. G." almost before the ropes were clear of the snubbing posts. The craft went south to make a start from a Florida port, and in due time the munitions were on the rolling deep.

History is silent as to why the mate got down on Shorty and worked up his old iron on him. Perhaps it was on account of the size of his feet or the squint of his eyes. Steamship mates are rather eccentric in their likes and dislikes. No matter what the basis, Shorty was selected as the man to be bounced about, and bounced he was. The filibuster craft was delayed at sea by accident, and again she was chased off the Cuban coast by a Spanish gunboat, and the mate had five or six days in which to make it plain to Shorty that he was not beloved.

The steamer at length headed in for the appointed rendezvous, but when ten miles off the shore two things happened. A gunboat was sighted bearing down on her, and darkness had scarcely come when a thick fog settled down with it. Shorty wasn't to blame for either the gunboat or the fog, but the mate swore that he was and gave him some more of the same old tonic.

No living man had ever heard Shorty O'Higgins utter threats of vengeance; no one had ever known of his striking back. Had the fish dealers of Fulton market been told that he thirsted for revenge after that last bouncing about they would have stood amazed. Nevertheless, such was the case. Yes, the worm had turned at last, and if the mate had been a mind reader he would have hastened to take off his cap and apologize.

The filibuster had reefs to look out for and an intricate channel to thread. As the fog came down she had to grope. A little later she came to a standstill. The Spaniard came up to within half a mile of her and began to play her search light. No good. Then she crept forward, fathom by fathom, with her crew at the guns.

The order had been "lights out" and no talking aboard the filibuster. Everything that could creak and groan was lashed fast, and such men as were forced to move about removed their shoes. The pall was so thick that a man standing amidships could not see stem or stern. The hare crouched in her form while the hound hunted to and fro. Presently, as the ocean was as quiet as a graveyard, Shorty found himself beside the mate. The mate wasn't thinking of bouncing anybody just then, but Shorty was reviewing the past. He reviewed for five minutes and then whispered in the mate's ear:

"Mr. Davis, I'm goin' to sneeze."

"If you do, I'll throttle you!" replied the mate as he turned on him.

"Mr. Davis, I'm goin' to sneeze, and you can get ready to go to the bottom of the sea and be banged to you!"

The mate had heard of "the Shorty sneeze," and even as he reached out to grasp the originator and sole proprietor by the throat and choke him into a state of limps he turned pale and his heart pounded his ribs. He failed to get to Shorty's neck in time. The sneeze came, and it was a sneeze that would have set 500 pedestrians along Front street wondering what tug had exploded her boilers. They could have heard it aboard the gunboat had she been four times as far away. There was a prompt halt in reply, and then, as the filibuster captain ripped out at a state of limps he turned pale and his heart pounded his ribs. He failed to get to Shorty's neck in time. # PRESENT EMPEROR WILLIAM'S GIFTS TO HARVARD COLLEGE

FIFTY PIECES SHOWING THE PROGRESS OF GERMAN ART SINCE THE ELEVENTH CENTURY.—RESULT OF MAKING PRINCE HENRY AN LL. D.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 7.—Preparations have been completed for the ceremonies of November 10, when Baron von Sternberg, the German ambassador, will formally present to the United States and to Harvard university as custodian, the gifts of Emperor William. These gifts consist of various works of art which are to form the basis of the new Germanic museum at Harvard.

During Prince Henry's visit to the United States last year he came to Harvard, where, on the afternoon of March 6, in the presence of the great student body and the dignitaries and officers of the university, the degree of Doctor of Laws was bestowed upon him. It was the first time in the history of an American university that a prince of the blood was granted this coveted honor. The news of the granting of the degree to Prince Henry was cabled to his brother, Emperor William, by one of the prince's retinue.

That evening, during a smoker to the prince by the students, and while his highness was joining in the throng, he had proposed to Harvard's son, President Roosevelt, he was handed the following message from the emperor:

"I congratulate you upon receiving today the degree of Harvard university, the highest honor America can bestow. May the copies of the examples of German art which I will have sent to America be to young Americans an incentive and an inspiring example in the pursuit of German studies, and in Germany."

MONEY FRANCE'S WEDGE TO GAIN CONTROL OF MOROCCO

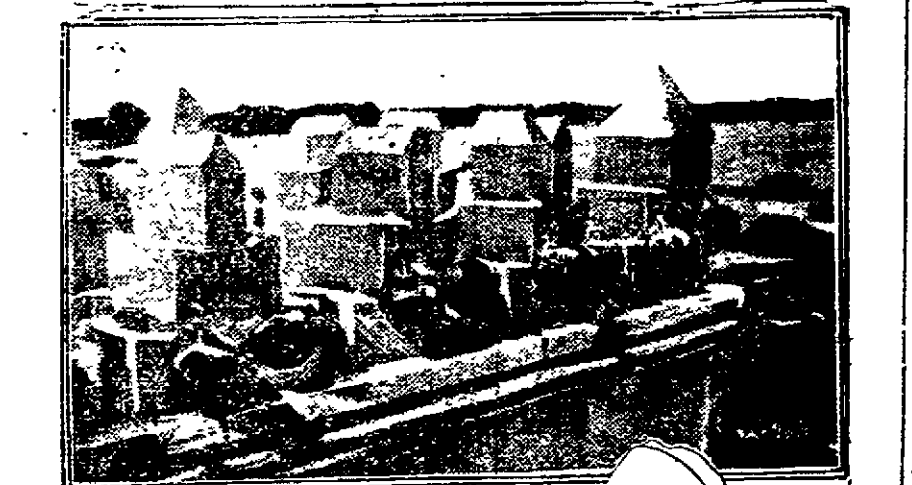

SULTAN MULEY. THE SICK MAN OF THE WEST, HARASSED WITHIN BECAUSE OF INNOVATIONS AND FROM WITHOUT BY EYES THAT LONG FOR TERRITORY.

BY W. E. STATER.

Newspaper Enterprise Association's Special Expedition to the Western Mediterranean.

Tangier, Nov. 7.—Muley Abdur Aziz, sultan of Morocco, is called the Sick Man of the West. He is also as far gone, some say farther, than the Sick Man of the East, Abdul Hamid, of Turkey. Yet Muley attributes all his troubles to trying to be up to date and progressive.

He has an unfortunate taste for modern European innovations and this so incensed his subjects that they have risen under a pretence from the inland hills and ever since the country has been so disturbed that France is getting ready to seize the whole of it in the interests of peace.

It was the purchase of an up-to-date pneumatic bicycle which proved the last straw to the prejudices of the fanatical Mohammedans. All the Europeans in Fez and other places in the interior have been ordered to the coast and the sultan has abandoned some of the innovations in order to calm his people. The fights so far have not been one-sided, but on the whole the sultan has had slightly the best of it. His Scotch commander, Kaid Maclean, has left Morocco for England, but a corporal of the British Royal Moroccan corps has been appointed cavalry instructor to the Moroccan army. The cavalry is a magnificent body of men, and the riders seem part of the notes of fame, to invade Morocco. But it is themselves as they charge furiously to bring the sultan to his knees

BOY CHARMER OF HORSES.

Legless Youth Causes Senator Fairbanks to Nearly Miss His Train.

Legless Joe Hartly, a fifteen-year-old newsboy, whose post is in front of the Auditorium theater in Chicago, counts among his best friends the "cabby" horses stationed in front of the Auditorium Annex hotel on the opposite side of the street, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. His friendship is reciprocated by the dumb animals, and thereby hangs a tale of how a United States senator missed his train a few nights ago.

Senator Fairbanks, anxious to catch a train for Indianapolis, rushed out of the Annex entrance about 5:30 o'clock the other evening and looked about for the carriage he had engaged to take him to the station. He scanned the line of carriages, but the one he had engaged was not to be seen among them. Then the senator glanced across the road and saw as picturesque a sight of city life as may be imagined.

"The carriage was standing in front of the theater, and almost beneath the feet of the horse was legless Joe patting the animal and talking to it, and he was doing something also which the senator did not see until he crossed the street. The boy was feeding the horse lump sugar.

"Isn't that an expensive habit?" the boy was asked.

"Maybe," he replied, "but I like the horses, and they like me. See?"

And then the crippled youth called out, "Charlie!" Another horse on the opposite side of the road pricked up its ears, strolled across the road and got his share of the sweets.

"The horses all know him," said the cabbies. "We can't keep them at their stands when he is around."

LAND OF THE NEW REPUBLIC

Dimensions of Panama and Its Resources.

Panama, the South American state which has proclaimed its independence of Colombia, includes the isthmus of Panama to the confines of Costa Rica, and its area is 32,380 square miles, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. About half the territory, principally in the middle and western parts, is settled. The remainder is peopled only by a few roving Indians. The grazing industry has attained some importance in the western districts; agriculture is everywhere backward, and the manufactures are insignificant.

Gold is mined in small quantities, and coal and other minerals are reported. The forests are rich in cabinet woods. The pearl fisheries of the Pacific coast have existed since the conquest and are still important.

Panama was the first region in continental America settled by Europeans. The isthmus was incorporated with the vice royalty of New Granada in 1718. It was independent from 1857 to 1860. The population at the last enumeration (1885) was 315,000.

The capital and largest city is Panama, founded in 1519 by Pedro Arias Davila. Its population is 25,000. The old city, six miles southeast of the present one, was burned in 1670 by Henry Morgan, the buccaneer. This is now marked only by ruins. The new city has suffered greatly from revolutions and fires.

Among the interesting buildings are the cathedral, one of the largest in America; convents and the palace of the audiencia. The climate is warm and damp, but more healthful than that of other parts of the isthmus.

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL PLAN

Boston Church Adopts a System Like That of Secular Schools.

Trinity church in Boston instituted its new method of Sunday school work the other day, says the New York Times. In a general sense it is an adaptation of secular school methods to those of the Sunday school.

Discipline will be strictly maintained, truancy will not be permitted, and punctuality in attendance is to be required, as in the public schools. Pupils who cannot fulfill the requirements will be dropped from the school roll. The object of the new system is to afford the children and young people who attend the school a religious education as thorough, or as nearly thorough as possible, as that afforded in the secular curriculum.

The school year will be divided into three terms—Advent, from Oct. 1 to Christmas; Lent, from the first Sunday in January to Palm Sunday; and Trinity, from the Sunday after Easter to the last Sunday in May.

The Summit of Luxury in Motor Cars.

The very latest thing in the way of motor cars seems to rob the railway palace car of its last advantage, says the New York American. This is the Marquis of Anglessey's new "Pullman" motor. The interior is a marvel of beauty and luxury. The whole of the woodwork is of polished mahogany, the windows have spring sun blinds, there are four revolving armchairs upholstered in dark red morocco leather, it is lighted by electricity and has a heating apparatus for use in winter. The ceiling is decorated in Louis XV. style, the car is furnished with royal blue plush curtains and bands and the floor covered with a dark crimson Wilton pile carpet.

The HONEYMOON COOK

By HARRIET G. CANFIELD

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

They had been married two years, "long enough," Prue suddenly declared, "to dispense with all honeymoon demonstrations."

Tom Dawson put down his evening paper and stared at the pretty little partner of his joys and sorrows. "I'm afraid I don't understand, dear," he said.

"Why, it's very simple. If you know that I care for you—and I am certain that you care for me—all signs of affection are quite superfluous; they may be dropped."

"Oh!" Tom said dubiously. "Well, what shall I drop first?" There was a twinkle in his eyes, and Prue saw it.

"To be serious," she pleaded, "to begin with, you must not kiss me when you come home to dinner and—other times. You must drop."

"Drop you a courtesy instead," he interrupted her laughingly.

"Don't be ridiculous, Tom! You know very well that there are many useless customs that should be abandoned, many things that should be dropped."

"Yes," he said, smiling whimsically; "Hannah thinks so, I know. She dropped my meerschaum this morning. We must take lessons of that girl, Prue, or drop her. On the whole, I think we'd better drop her."

"It will not be necessary," she said, with dignity. "Hannah gave notice this morning. I shall have to find some one else within a week."

"I'm sorry—sorry; I mean, for the family she'll drop down on next. Hannah's no feather weight, you know. Speaking of dropping—"

"I am not speaking of it now. It is quite useless while you are in such a mood," she said indignantly, rising from her chair.

Before she could leave the room Tom was at her side. "Forgive me, dear," he said. "I didn't know you were in such a sober earnest." He stopped to kiss the pink cheek next to him, but Prue lifted a protesting hand. "Don't, Tom!" she said. "You forget; it isn't necessary."

"No, it isn't necessary,"—the words came soberly enough now—"only sweet and natural."

And the next day, when the time came to say goodby, Prue had no occasion to complain of his "honeymoon demonstrations."

"Tom is very sensible this morning," she said to herself, but she sighed as she said it and went about all day with a wistful look in her blue eyes. Tom was "sensible" in the evening also, and the next morning he was so very sensible that Prue cried a little, but perhaps it was for joy. Even "sensible" people do that.

That afternoon Matilda made her appearance. Hannah came into the sitting room to announce her arrival. "Matilda Stebbins is here, Mrs. Dawson," she said, "after my place. Will I show her in, ma'am? She and me used to work together once, and she's a dreadful good cook."

"Yes, I will see her," Prue said. And in a moment a tall, freckle faced girl was standing in the doorway, smiling at her. "Will you be seated?" Prue asked pleasantly, and the girl slid into a chair, still smiling.

"I hope you'll give me a try," she said. "I'd like first rate to cook for you and him."

It was Prue's turn to smile. "Have you had much experience?" she asked. "Heaps of it, ma'am, but never long to one place."

"That seems stranger," Prue exclaimed.

"Well, you see, ma'am, the honeymoons don't usually stretch out over and above six months."

"The honeymoons?"

"Yes, ma'am. I don't cook and do for none but new married folks. Hannah told me about you and him when she first came here two months ago. She said as how she knew you was just married."

Prue blushed. "How did Hannah know it?" she asked.

"Easy enough, ma'am. It's like measles and whoopin' cough. She could tell by the symptoms. I'd rather live where there's lovin' makin' goin' on continual than read the best novel ever made up."

This was interesting, but very embarrassing to Mrs. Thomas Dawson. Two days ago she would have laughed heartily at Matilda's sayings and have found much enjoyment in repeating them to Tom. But present conditions made the girl's remarks seem almost personal, yet she felt tempted to engage her.

"Matilda," said she, "did Hannah tell you the wages she received and the work she was expected to do?"

"Yes'm, she did, and I don't think she'll better herself none goin' to work in a factory."

"Very well. I will give you a trial. When can you come?"

"I can stay now, ma'am, and get dinner if you'll let me go home for my clothes when the work's rid up. Hannah wants to leave as soon as she can anyway."

And so it happened that the honeymoon cook held sway in the Dawson kitchen when the owner of the house came home that evening.

"You will be glad to hear that I've engaged a new girl," Prue said to him in the distant polite tone that she had recently adopted in speaking to her husband.

"Very glad," he answered. "If she is an improvement on Hannah."

The dinner was excellent, and Matilda was very attentive in her service at table, beaming on them as though she would say, "Bless you, my children!" Late in the evening, when they were apparently much absorbed in reading, they heard a strange sound, half cough, half sneeze, in the hall. Prue looked up from the book. "What was that?" she said. Tom was on his way to the door when Matilda entered the room. "It was me, ma'am," she said. "I never walk in on new married folks without givin' 'em warnin' I'm a-comin'—not at first. Of course they get used to me after awhile and go right on lovin' if I do see 'em. Nothin' suits me better'n that!"

Prue's face was scarlet. She dared not look at Tom. Oh, why had she engaged the services of such a silly, sentimental creature?

"If you please, ma'am," Matilda continued, "I'm goin' home now to get my clothes, and I'll say good night to you and him."

"Thought we were 'new married folks,' did she?" Tom said grimly. "I can't imagine why. She's a good cook," he added, "and I hope we can keep her."

"We can," Prue said to herself, "if we will meet her peculiar requirements. But I'll not be driven into any foolishly unnecessary display of affection."

For three days the Dawsons enjoyed the results of Matilda's culinary efforts, but a heavy hen will affect the best of appetites somewhat, and on the fourth day Matilda complained that they "didn't seem to relish their victuals" and she "guessed she'd better be goin'."

"Oh, no," Prue cried. "No one could suit us better than you do."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am; but there's another reason." And she hung her head.

Prue was painfully embarrassed, for she could guess the other reason. "I hope you will stay," she stammered.

"I'll think it over till tomorrow, ma'am, but I feel as if Hannah hadn't been fair with me, leavin' me to expect things was different between you and him from what they really be."

Tom came home later than usual that night. Prue was in the hall giving some instructions to Matilda when he opened the door. His eyes looked tired and sad, she thought. She hesitated a moment—only a moment—for Matilda was present, and now was her opportunity to redeem herself in the girl's eyes, when she ran to meet her husband and held up her face to be kissed. The tired look faded from his eyes as if by magic, and he put both arms around her and held her close. "Has my little wife come to her senses?" he asked.

"Hush!" she answered. "I still think it's unnecessary, but Matilda likes it. She refuses to stay unless we are 'affectionate like.'" And she laughed hysterically.

"Oh," Tom said. That was all, but there was a world of disappointment in the exclamation. Then he looked beyond his wife at Matilda, who stood beaming at him, her hands clasped in ecstasy. "Well, she'll stay now," he said bitterly. "I congratulate you."

Yes; Matilda had decided to remain. She came to the sitting room door after dinner to announce her decision.

After she had gone Prue left her seat and moved restlessly about the room. Then she sighed so deeply that Tom looked up from his paper. "Head-ache?" he asked.

"N-no," she said. Her lips trembled, and she buried her face in her hands and sobbed out, "It's just heart ache, Tom."

"Heart ache?" he said gently. "I thought I had a monopoly of that."

Prue came close to his chair and leaned against an arm of it. "Tom," she cried remorsefully—"Tom, dear, will you forgive me and"—her voice sank to a whisper—"kiss me?"

He caught her hands in his and drew her down beside him. "To please Matilda?" he asked.

"Oh, Tom, you know better!"

"Because if it's to please that girl I'll be hanged if I"—But something prevented further speech just then.

When the Dawsons celebrated their tin wedding it was with the assistance of their honeymoon cook.

An Unfamiliar Dialect.

An American woman who was lately in London for the first time is convinced that whatever the language may be which the cockneys speak it is not English. One of her experiences is related by the Washington Post.

The woman wished to see the city all by herself. Somebody told her that if she went to the terminus of some bus lines, it did not matter which, and waited a little she would hear the conductor call out the places on the route and then could choose that which she wished to visit.

She found a place where buses were arriving and departing and waited. She heard many curious names, but failed to understand much that the bus men said. Every now and then the man on the step of a bus would call out, "Moblotch, Moblotch!" and she wondered what part of London "Moblotch" might be. She had never heard of it before, and she had been studying London for six months. At last she ventured to address a conductor who looked approachable.

"Will you kindly tell me," she said, "where one takes the bus for the Marble arch?"

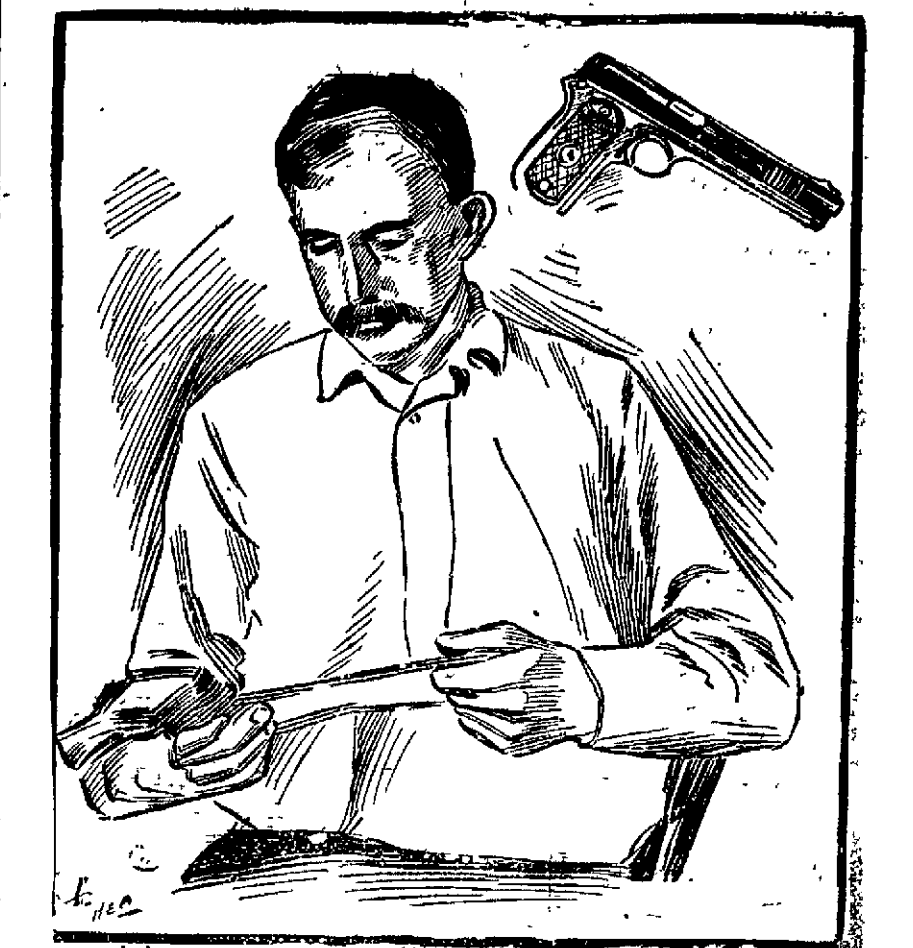

The man looked at her pityingly. Her American accent was thick upon her, and he perceived also that she must be deaf. He leaned toward her and drew a long breath. Then he belated:

"This is your bus, ma'am," and began to shout, "Moblotch, Moblotch!"

FATHER GUARDS JAIL TILL HIS SON'S MURDERER IS HANGED

TOM HORN, THE COWBOY WHO KILLED A 14 YEAR OLD BOY IN ORDER TO DRIVE HIS FATHER OUT OF THE COUNTRY, DOOMED.

MURDERER TOM HORN AND THE NEW FANGLED REVOLVER THAT FOOLED HIM.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 7.—The unusual spectacle of a father guarding against the possible escape of the murderer of his son is being witnessed here.

Night and day Kels P. Nickell marches up and down in front of the county jail, only retiring when overcome by exhaustion. When he is obliged to seek a little rest his place is taken by a trusted friend.

Inside the jail is confined Tom Horn a cowboy, who is to be hanged Nov. 30, for the murder of Wm. Nickell. The father of the murdered boy is determined to be on hand to give an account of himself, should the desperado by any chance manage to gain the exterior of the jail. As the day of the execution approaches rumors of plot for escape are rife.

The strain under which the men in charge of Horn are laboring is shown by the haggard faces of the sheriff and his deputies. Any attempt to deliver Horn will be met with a resistance that can't be overcome. With two Colt rapid-fire guns sweeping the approaches to the court house, and the sheriff's office guarded by determined men, the jail has become a fortress impregnable to any save an overwhelming force.

By profession Horn was a "stock detective." He has been in the employ of several cattle "barons" and his business aboveboard was to run down cattle thieves and recover stolen animals. In New Mexico, Texas, Wyoming, Montana and Colorado he has done this kind of work, always dangerous and requiring much crafty work.

The cattle barons at one and another have found it desirable to drive out sheepmen, and Willie Nickell, the 14 year old boy, according to the evidence at Horn's trial, fell a victim to the desire of certain cattlemen to drive out his father and his herds from the Blue Springs country of Wyoming. Old man Nickell's herds had been poisoned, anonymous notes had threatened him death, his property had been burned.

One day his son was found murdered in the road. The boy's head rested on a stone, a sort of pillow which his assassin had arranged after shooting him dead from the bush.

Horn talked too much while drinking in Cheyenne one day with a fellow deputy marshal. He told of numerous killings he claimed he had done, and a stenographer in an adjoining room took down notes, which, supported by other evidence, caused his conviction. Among other things it was said that the placing of the stone under the boy's head was Horn's sign so that the "right" people might know he had earned the money offered him for making Nickell leave Wyoming.

Wealthy interests put up a stiff legal battle for Horn, under pressure, it is said, of fear that Horn might tell for whom he was working. But it availed him nothing and he was sentenced to death.

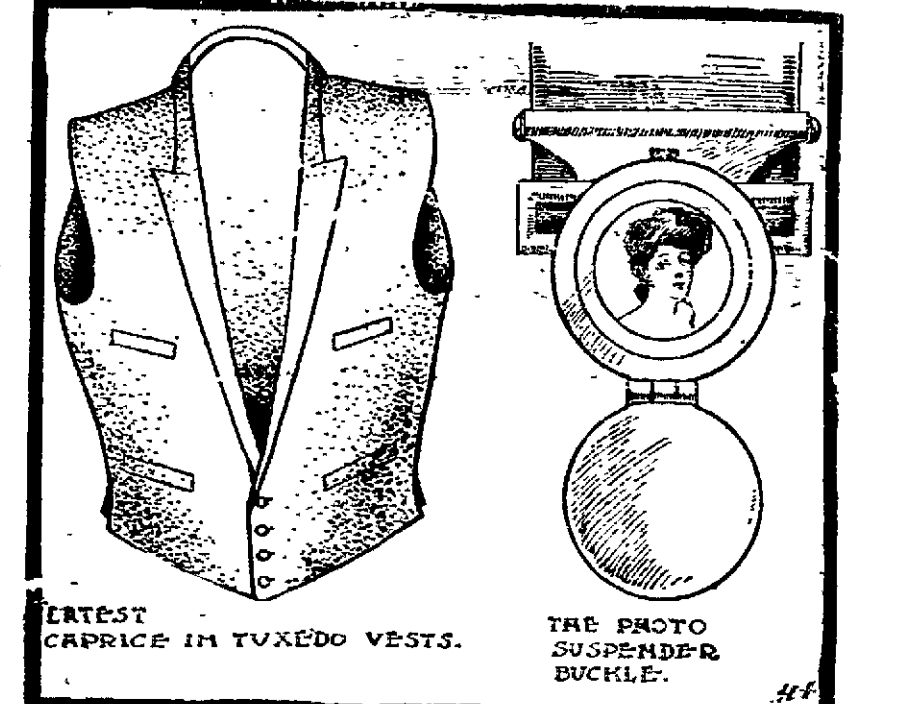

Last August, Horn and Jim McLoud, accused of postoffice robbery, made a sensational break for liberty at Cheyenne. They overpowered under Sheriff Proctor, carried him to the jail office and told him to open the safe in which, to gain time, he had said the jail keys were locked. McLoud held a Winchester against Proctor's head. As the safe was about to open Proctor said: "There's Winchester ammunition in that closet." McLoud turned. Proctor pulled a new-style Belgian revolver from the safe and shot McLoud through the thigh. The desperadoes overpowered him. McLoud unlocked the doors with the keys he had taken from Proctor's pocket, while Horn still tried to wrest the revolver from Proctor. He finally got it. "Now your time has come," he said taking deliberate aim at Proctor. But the clever deputy had slipped the safety catch and the trigger would not move. Horn ran out and both he and McLoud were recaptured within ten minutes.

"That new fangled gun saved your life," he said to Proctor later.

"Yes, I know I'm under no obligations to you for still drawing breath," Proctor replied.

"You're dead right," said Horn.

YOUR BEST GIRL'S FACE ON THE SUSPENDER BUCKLE

New York, Nov. 7.—Elegance in suspenders is the order of the day in fanciful Gotham. The latest in fine braces calls for the photograph. This means that the locket idea forms a part of the side, the case of the locket being engraved with the wearer's monogram.

Inside is the photograph of the favored one. These buckles are made of solid gold and sterling silver, but, of course, copies will appear in plate and composition metals to meet the purses of the less affluent. Webs of silk or satin and buttonhole ends of white kid complete these braces.

What style of vest to wear this winter with the tuxedo, or dinner jacket, is a mooted question in dressy circles. Various attempts are being made by extremists to exploit something radically new. Black silk vests cut single-breasted and buttoned rather high have been tried, but the majority cling to the plain cloth.

Never worn informally at night, the white vest is strictly out of the tuxedo race. A compromise between the fanciful and severely plain is a novelty. It closes low with four silk buttons and has a long deep V-shaped opening with narrow oblique lapels sharply peaked. There are no pockets and the front ends in a slight point.
